Out of the 8th seed, an 8th title
By Brian McKim

On a crisp Monday morning in Lincoln in front of 1,800 estimated fans at Memorial Stadium, the FC Sacred Heart Irish earned a third come-from-behind playoff win of this fall and in doing so, captured the program’s eighth state football championship, beating Twin Loup 44-28.

Sacred Heart, the eighth seed in the East bracket entering this year’s playoffs, went through top-seeded Osceola with an implausible 34-28 road win in the second round, then traveled way north and hammered fifth-seeded Bloomfield 46-12 before finally returning home to face No. 1-ranked and second-seeded BDS in a dramatic rematch of a 36-12 Irish loss back on Oct. 7. Sacred Heart’s thrilling 16-12 winning drive mounted capped with 14 seconds left on the clock, secured a return trip to Lincoln’s Memorial Stadium for the D2 title game, against the No. 1 seed in the West.

Thanksgiving is this week and I couldn’t be happier about it. We are sliding into my favorite time of the year. Granny’s oyster stuffing, mom’s bevy of decadent desserts and buttered rolls like Aunt Mayree used to make... and yes, their anything better?

For the past two weeks I have been in a whirlwind of group texts making sure every detail of Thanksgiving week is perfect, cleaning my house and doing last minute food planning. Alex has been assisting me in the kitchen lately and will be helping me bake seven pies, dozens of rolls and homemade potato salad. We’ve been slowly working on things week in the kitchen and tahun, as several of you get this paper, we will be working non-stop to start your Thanksgiving preparation.

After we’ve all devoured far too much food, my favorite part of the entire year starts. Black Friday shopping. For my sister, cousin and me, the conversation starts months away. Who would drive what, who will bring the stack of coupons from the Thanksgiving day paper and a dashboard calendar to remind us. You get the idea. We are a family that doesn’t want to wait.

The Nebraska Legislature: It's a family affair
By Trudy Lieberman, Rural Health News Service

Even though the election is over and Republicans are in a position to repeal and replace Obamacare as they’re vowing to do for several years, that doesn’t mean you should avoid signing up for 2017 insurance coverage.

If you’re eligible and need insurance, the state shopping exchanges are open business even if options this year are limited in many counties, particularly in rural areas. More than 40 percent of the counties where residents are required to buy an Obamacare policy have just one insurer selling them. That’s not a lot of choice, and policies that are offered are likely to have high premiums and limited options for doctors and hospitals.

Still, some careful shopping is in order to minimize any surprise bills such as the White House Press Secretary Josh Earnest said Americans are signing up and announced “the vast majority” of eligible consumers would be able to buy insurance for a premium of $75 or less, which has been the administration’s sales pitch.

Assuming the White House math is correct, that doesn’t mean the vast majority should automatically buy a policy with a $75 premium. That strategy can mean expensive trouble later on. Reviewing the basics before wading into the Obamacare marketplace this year is essential.

For starters, recall that platinum,premiums, prices that seem too good to be true. Consumers who bought that risk.

But if you’re like the Indiana couple, and afraid of high expenses for future hospitalizations from 20 percent to 50 percent.

It was a risk they weren’t willing to take, and they shopped. Here’s where comparison-shopping gets tricky. It’s possible a bronze policy and maybe a silver one could end up costing more than a gold one with a higher premium if you get sick. That’s because of the relationship between the premium, copays, coinsurance and deductibles. Insurers mix and match these features to fit their marketing strategy.

In general, a lower premium means higher deductibles and higher out-of-pocket-expenses. A policy with a higher premium often means lower out-of-pocket costs.

As a result, an average family would have to pay out-of-pocket for copays, coinsurance and deductibles is $14,300. That’s a lot of money and enough to deter some from signing up. Many people say paying that much before insurance pays isn’t really insurance. It’s also high enough to keep people from seeking medical care even when they need it because nobody wants to go to the doctor less likely to be covered, and high out-of-pocket premiums will drop - at least that’s the rationale for the high out-of-pocket limit.

An Indiana couple I’ve written about before in this column recently sex without birth control methods on our family planning options for more. Their carrier had increased their $386 monthly premium to about $1,300, more than twice what the Obamacare tax credits would get us for that plan. The reader said, the insurer had raised the amount of coinsurance for hospitalizations from 20 percent to 50 percent. Given how much a hospital stay costs, they worried they’d be on the hook for a lot of money until they reached the $4,300 out-of-pocket maximum for the year. But they were selling to take, and they shopped. Even if you need many medical services, you may want to take a chance and buy less expensive insurance that comes with bigger deductibles and lower coinsurance.

But if you’re like the Indiana couple, and afraid of high expenses for unexpected medical care, buy the best policy you can afford that reduces that risk.

Another thing to keep in mind is Exchange of policies with really low premiums, prices that seem too good to be true. Consumers who bought insurance from the Obamacare co-ops learned that.

Almost all of the co-ops compétent to compete with the big carriers have gone out of business. They priced their policies too low, and too many people signed up. Government regulators closed them down, sending thousands of people scrambling for new coverage - an unwelcomed chore for anyone.

Meals on Wheels in Humboldt

The Humboldt Meals on Wheels program is desperately in need of volunteers to help deliver noon meals.

The program provides a nutritional, low-cost meal for participating elderly or disabled for five days, five weeks. Last year, SENCA meal programs provided 22,201 meals to residents in John- son, Pawnee and Richardson Coun- ties. The program allows partici- pates to remain independent and in their own homes, however, the program cannot function without the help of local volunteers.

Volunteers pick up the meals at 11:30 a.m. from Colonial Acres Nursing Home and Assisted Living in Humboldt. Volunteers are asked to allow 30-40 minutes each day for delivery as the number of individu- als served can vary. About 10 minutes after the meals have been delivered, the cooler or other items utilized to transport the meals are returned to Colonial Acres.

If interested in volunteering can contact SENCA in Humboldt 402- 862-2411, ext. 108 and speak with Anita Kimpston, Data and Com- munity Services Coordinator.

F&M Bank announces this months Hometown Spirit Award winner

F&M Bank is excited to announce their November “You’ve Got the Hometown Spirit” award goes to Helping Hands! On November 10th, they presented Linda Kirkendall and all the Helping Hands volunteers and leaders with their “You’ve Got the Hometown Spirit” award certificate and $50 in Champlin bucks.

Helping Hands is a group of student volunteers from Falls City Sacred Heart. This group was started by Marcia Schwartz many years ago and after she retired was taken over by Linda Kirkendall. This group consists of 7th through 12th grade students that volunteer for their school, church and the community.

This group of volunteers has raked many lawns, helped individu- als move, helped set up vendors at the Annual Craft Fair, and wrapped Christmas presents. They have cleaned up the stands at Prichard after a game, helped at the turkey bazaar and the Knights of Columbus fish fry. This group also helped with a few fun runs, golf tournaments and other events.

Even though the Helping Hands group does all of their work for free, they still receive donations throughout the year. The money do- nated has gone to different things for the school such as the purchase of televisions, DVD’s, books for the library, and treats for test weeks. Cur- rently, the students are using all of donations to purchase tables for the Rodeo Activity Center.

The volunteer work Helping Hands does for the community is remark- able. F&M Bank is proud to recognize all the Helping Hands volunteers and leaders for all their hard work!

Please join F&M Bank in congratulating their November “You’ve Got the Hometown Spirit” award recipient!

History in the Making

President-elect Donald J. Trump and Charles W. Herbster

What a night! We were all part of history in the making. As I watched the election results stream in with the Trump team at the Hilton Hotel in New York City, we witnessed a turning point in America. As the map began to fill with red states representing millions of individual voices across the nation, we were humbled by the response. The map, to me, represented the bleeding hearts of U.S. citizens who are concerned for America, our future, our jobs, our families and our freedom. Core American values will now be upheld. It's time to bring back the pride in our country.

We are blessed as a country to have a man who loves and believes in America as our next president. I am so thankful for God’s intervention in the election, and I pray for guidance and wisdom for President-elect Donald J. Trump as he serves this great country. I am confident he will surround himself with wise, competent leaders and will look to the Lord for guidance. It is time for Americans to take a stand.

I have given Mr. Trump and his campaign “my all” in this election for the presidency, realizing the America we know and love will be preserved by a win. Reaching past his years as president, the impact of this election will shape America far into the future. Mr. Trump’s appointments to the Supreme Court and the decisions these justices will make will impact our children and our grandchildren. His policies will support small businesses; keeping them in operation and creating jobs our middle class so desperately need. Common sense will once again play a role in decision-making, and the country will be run like a successful business and spend your tax dollars with scrutiny. It is time to clean up state and national politics.

An important lesson learned from this campaign is to never give up on something in which you believe. Mr. Trump never gave up! He was attacked by Hillary Clinton, the news media and some of the established Republicans. Watching the forecasted polls, it appeared that Mr. Trump needed a miracle to be elected president. Never losing hope, Juddy reminded me that miracles are never a “sure thing,” because then they would not be miracles. Now it’s time to celebrate the miracle.

Mr. Trump cannot make these changes alone. It will take the unity, time and effort of the entire nation. I challenge each of you to join me and do your part to make your voices heard.

Let’s Make America Great Again!

Charles W. Herbster,
National Chairman of the Agricultural and Rural Advisory Committee for Donald J. Trump
