‘Antique Store’

June 28, 1947

Residents of Connecticut will recognize the setting of John Falter’s cover. The store is patterned after one the artist has patronized in Southport, Connecticut. It occurred to Falter that rarity is a relative thing, and that dealers in the old and unusual might be interested this summer in the new and unusual—a new car. If you could hear the antique dealers in his painting, you would hear them making the same sighs of awe and delight over the gleaming new automobile in which their customers arrived as the antique hunters are making over the pre-automobile chair. “How I’d like to have that,” is what all concerned are saying about different subjects.

Deception of Perception

If you drive by the south side of Falls City High School, along 14th Street, you might notice the brilliant art work adorning the garage door entrance to the school’s industrial technology/vo-ag facility.

Then again, you might just assume the door is open and FCHS students are simply hard at their welding work. But, wait, it is July. If your eyes tricked you into thinking class hasn’t been dismissed during all of the past two months, don’t sweat it. That’s what your eyes are supposed to do when artists force your perspective. Last spring, advanced art students, under the tutelage of Gayle Weinert, collaborated to create an optical illusion mural (called trompe-l’oeil by the French, or “deceive the eye”) depicting the garage door wide open and agriculture students, in three dimensions, hard at work in the shop. The forced perspective technique employs lighting and shading to make an object appear farther away, closer, larger or smaller than it actually is. It manipulates human visual perception through the use of scaled objects and the correlation between them and the vantage point of the spectator or camera. The theme was created out of brainstorming session among the artists, with assistance from faculty members.

Administration approval was requested and Principal Gale Dunkhas wholeheartedly supported the idea.

Ag instructor Brian Miller and Mrs. Weinert discussed staging a photo of one of his classes, in an effort to provide reference for the artists. Mr. Miller’s seventh period students pulled their welding stations near the doorway of the shop and performed their work under the harsh glare of the photo lens. The door was then power washed and scrubbed. The paint experts at Farm & City Supply helped with choosing the right type of paint for the surface of the door. Photos were selected, combined and altered to get the picture to fit the proportions of the door. After a brief sketching session, the students began painting.

Three classes of seniors and a few juniors worked together for approximately three weeks to complete the mural. The (perceptual con) artists: Jessi Dean, Austin Cochran, Tyler Ebel, Mary Patnode, Bailey Gilkerson, Leslie Vitosh, Emma Gerdes, Tayten O’Brien, Darcy Snethen, Morgan Bletscher, Alyssa Frederick, Peyton Campbell, Halee Roseberry, Molly Brown, Morgan Roberts, Bailey Armbruster, Annie Moreno, Hannah Pfohl and Izaiah Meyer.

Goodness Snakes Alive!

Henry Doorly Zoo outreach packs ‘em in at library

By Lori Gottula

On Thursday afternoon, July 6, the lobby of the Falls City Library and Arts Center was so jam-packed with people that a children’s book illustrator would’ve drawn it with kids bursting out the windows. More than 350 adults and children came to see a program that was presented by two staff members of Omaha’s Henry Doorly Zoo and Aquarium.

Peter Brunette, outreach coordinator at the zoo, and Holly Arndt, one of the zoo’s educational instructors, brought three animals and several pelts so the children in the audience could learn not only by listening and seeing, but also by touching.

The three live animals were: a desert kangaroo rat, an eastern box turtle, and a boa constrictor from Hog Island (one of the islands near Honduras). The snake, of course, brought the most excitement and curiosity. Kids’ eyes lit up. Adults backed away.

“How many mice does this snake eat per day?” Brunette asked. Several hands shot into the air. Three? Five? Ten?

“Zero,” Brunette said. “The snake eats one mouse every two weeks. She’s a cold-blooded reptile, so she doesn’t need to eat every day.”

Two thumbs, way up! Gavin Dean gave the zoo program a rave review.

Brunette and Arndt covered the characteristics of the snake and the other two animals, but also talked about penguins, turtles, cheetahs, polar bears, and several sea creatures.

“The fur of a polar bear looks white or beige,” Brunette said, as he paced in front of the crowd carrying a polar bear pelt, “But each individual hair is actually clear or colorless. When they’re together on the bear, they appear white or beige.”

The kids looked at each other in disbelief. So did most of the adults.

The instructors not only talked about many of the animals at the zoo, they also covered the three “R’s” that each of us can do to help animals everywhere: reduce, reuse and recycle. In other words, if we take care of our environment and reduce energy consumption, we not only help ourselves, but our furry, feathered, and fish friends, too.

At the end of the program, the audience members were

Walk, Don't Run

By: Nikki McKim

Recently a Z-List 'Celebrity' insinuated that I was fat. I use the term Z-list instead of D-list because this person is somehow below Kim Kardashian in the world and I wasn't sure it got much lower than that family. The term this person used to describe me was 'thick.' I share this story because it has weighed heavily on me since it happened. I'm not sharing this to have anyone send me messages telling me that I am not fat and I'm fine the way I am. I'm telling this story because it has happened to you, someone you know, or it's something you have thought about saying to someone.

Someone said a while back that I shouldn't point out my flaws to anyone, especially my husband. 'When you point them out, he becomes aware that you know you're letting yourself go and he will find someone who works harder on themselves,' this person said. I happen to believe that if I point out my flaws to everyone I can make fun of myself before someone else does. That tactic hasn't worked for me.

At the function I was attending, I walked up to this washed up has-been and asked for a photo. He muttered something under his breath and walked away from me. I decided to wait a little longer and try again 'May I get a picture with you?' This time he laughed at me and walked away again. My feelings were hurt, but I decided to try it one last time before I left. (At this point I should have walked away, but there have been moments that I didn't try to get photos with people and still regret it to this day because I was too shy or embarrassed to ask) 'May I get a picture with you quickly before I leave?' He turned to me and said, 'You're too thick, I like them like her,' he pointed at a beautiful thin woman sitting nearby. All the wind escaped my body, and my eyes started to burn as they welled up with tears. I backed away slowly and towards door. I watched this person get approached by a thin blonde who asked for a photo with him. He smiled and said 'sure' before he shook her hand and introduced herself.

I walked out the door and to my car praying I wouldn't let my friend who was the beautiful skinny woman referenced to before see me cry. 'Please God just let me make it home,' I begged over and over in my head. The moment I dropped her off the tears poured. That night I sat on my couch and cried for nearly four hours.

While Brian and I were in L.A., we sat at the end of the red carpet to watch the celebrities walk into the theater. I sat next to my much thinner friend Angie in the front row. Twice she was interviewed, and one of those times a person pointed to me as if they were saying 'talk to her next,' and the other person shook their head no. I get it; I was slouched over with a grimace on my face because that is my natural look. Maybe it wasn't because I was heavier than anyone else in the front row, but maybe it was. I was in Hollywood, and I understood my place at that moment. It hurt, but it didn't kill me. Somehow I understood the pecking order. Also, I wouldn't have liked to be on camera anyway, so I was a bit relieved.

Now, this is the point where you say 'Nikki, eat better and exercise, duh.' Well, I did, I spent two months eating healthy and exercising nearly every night before we went to L.A. The weight still climbed. There are several factors/excuses that I could list here to make myself feel better, but I won't. Listen, I know that I am heavy, but it's nobody else's place to point that out to a crowd of people. I have recently decided to bite the bullet and head to the doctor to get some help or an extra push. Maybe something is a little off, and that is why everything is a bit harder for me when it comes to losing weight. Maybe the Doctor will tell me that I'm just lazy and not doing the right exercises or eating the right thing. I read an article the other day about a celebrity who was recently diagnosed with a brain tumor. She said something along the lines of 'We get our car checked when it makes a noise, but we don't get our bodies checked when they do.' My body has been screaming at me for quite a while now and only when I feel like I may die, do I get it checked out.

It seems as though when celebrities get called fat, they learn a very important lesson. I have read countless articles about how they 'learned to love themselves,' or they say 'fat doesn't define me.' I am literally rolling my eyes as I type this. I fully believe that deep down they were in the same position as me, flat on my stomach crying into a pillow for four hours. If you search 'being called fat' in Google, the first article is titled 'What I learned from being called "fat."'

What did I learn from being called fat? Well, I learned that it hurts in a way that is indescribable. I learned that I might think I'm hiding it well under my baggy shirts and by hiding in my house, but I'm apparently not. I learned that people are probably as mean as you think they are. At the end of the day, I can honestly say that I learned nothing of real value. This wasn't an Oprah 'Ah-Ha' moment for me. It was a low point that left me numb and angry.

There is no moral to the story here. I'm acknowledging that someone else made me feel bad and defeated, so they win. I'll keep trying to lose weight because I am not comfortable in my body. I don't use this person's words as a motivator because they don't deserve that. If I lose weight, this person will not be the reason why. I will do it for me, not someone who is hateful and mean, who is living in the past. I didn't want to turn this into a rant, but I did-sorry.

So to the guy who made me feel bad about myself, you ruined my day and the day after that because my head pounded and my eyes were swollen from sobbing so much the night before. I'm incredibly over sensitive and maybe after a while I'll lose weight and I'll forget about your comment and about you, but you will still have made yourself look like a jerk in front of a lot of people, and you will more than likely remain a jerk.

Next time I'll quote Joe Dirt, 'Is this where you wanna be when Jesus comes back; making fun of poor Joe Dirt?' It seems fitting, right?

Tolerance: will it ever break out in Nebraska?

Capitol View
By J.L. Schmidt
Statehouse Correspondent
Nebraska Press Association

"It's not likely that tolerance will soon break out in Nebraska." Those words from Charles Kuralt on a Dateline America piece about the Nebraska Interstate 80 Bicentennial Sculpture Project in 1976. Still haunting. Sadly true.

Kuralt was standing in front of Erma's Desire, a piece that still stands, almost forgotten, at the western edge of the eastbound I-80 rest stop at Grand Island. The project raised eyebrows and controversy since none of the artists were from Nebraska and the artwork was abstract. A series of statewide public hearings were held to discuss the project ... and not everybody liked it.

Four decades later we're still struggling with intolerance in Nebraska. Attorney General Doug Peterson announced that he is joining nine other Republican state attorneys general in asking that the Trump administration reverse its earlier decision to allow so-called DACA (Deferred Action for Childhood Arrivals) youth to retain legal presence in the United States. That would impact more than 3,000 young immigrants in Nebraska.

Until this session, Nebraska lawmakers have consistently supported the DACA youth who were brought to the country when they were babies or young children. Passed over gubernatorial vetoes (one during the Dave Heineman administration and two under the Pete Ricketts administration), lawmakers granted resident college tuition rates, driver's licenses and professional and commercial licenses.

But, the wheels came off the tolerance wagon this year when state senators narrowly approved a resolution (LR26) opposing any federal action to rescind protections for DACA youth. The resolution was approved on a 24-1 vote with 17 senators present but declining to vote. There were seven senators excused and not voting.

Of those present and not voting, 16 were Republicans and one Democrat, Burk Harr from Omaha. So, when is a senator's "present and not voting" the same as a "no" vote. It's often just a safe way to appease both the constituents who elected them and the governor who keeps track.

Peterson admits that he struggles with the issue on a personal level, but his duty is "fidelity to the Constitution" and that the executive branch has exceeded its authority in the matter and must be reined in (my words, not his). The Trump administration has vacillated on the issue thus far.

What if part of Peterson's position is based on the big R behind his name? Given the votes in the Legislature and the history of vetoes by Republican governors, fighting DACA just seems to be the Republican thing to do. Just as much as voting for the proposals seems to be the Democrat thing to do. Or so we would deduce based on our understanding of the parties.

The post-session action is a fitting end to the 2017 Session of Our Discontent. Never has the nonpartisan Nebraska Legislature been this polarized. Peterson's action doesn't do anything to ease the situation.

But because of the Falls City Library and Arts Center, and Omaha's Henry Doorly Zoo and Aquarium, local kids had an opportunity that many may not have had otherwise. Blue Cross Scam
The Attorney General's Office received notice this morning that scam artists based in Florida are posing as Blue Cross and Blue Shield of Nebraska.
The scam artists are using fake Google and Manta listings bearing Blue Cross's logo and web address, along with bogus physical addresses in Omaha. Investigators believe the scam is affiliated with an entity called Simple Health based out of Hollywood, FL. When contacted by phone, the scam artists collect personal information and offer insurance plans well below market value. Simple Health victims have reported online that the company charges their credit card monthly, but never provides insurance cards or proof of coverage. They also make it difficult to cancel service.
Consumers who may have been victimized by this scam are encouraged to contact the Attorney General's Consumer Protection Division at 800-727-6432.

Most Successful NLC Ever for Nebraska PBL

More than 1,800 of America's best and brightest college students traveled to Southern California to establish their own Legacy of Leadership as they competed for the opportunity to win more than $95,000 in cash awards.

The Phi Beta Lambda (PBL) National Leadership Conference (NLC) was held June 24-27 in Anaheim. Participants from across the United States attended this exciting conference to enhance their business skills, expand their networks, and participate in 60 business and business-related competitive events.

Nearly 100 Nebraska PBL members and advisers were among the 1,800 at the Anaheim NLC.

Nebraska PBL members captured a best-ever nine first places at their recent National Leadership Conference and the state chapter brought home a record-setting 54 Top Ten finishes. As a state, only the Florida State Chapter fared better than Nebraska PBL in 2017. In addition, a number of the members earned a cash prize along with their respective placing.

In addition, Scott Riley (Auburn) of the Peru State PBL chapter was elected to serve as the Mountain Plains Vice President for the 2017-18 year. It is believed that Riley is the first Peru State member to hold a national office since Amy Henzel was the Mountain Plains VP in 1990-91. Riley is currently serving as the president of the Nebraska State Chapter this year.

The awards earned are a part of a comprehensive national competitive events program sponsored by FBLA-PBL that recognizes and rewards excellence in a broad range of business and career-related areas. For many students, the competitive events are the capstone activity of their academic careers. In addition to the competitions, students immersed themselves in educational workshops, visited an information-packed exhibit hall, and attended motivational keynotes on a broad range of business topics.

Nine First Place Event Winners: Out of the 54 national awards won by its members and chapters, Nebraska PBL had nine first place honors.

The Parliamentary Procedure team from Doane University and University of Nebraska at Kearney took the top honors. Doane took second place to give Nebraska the top two teams in the country!

Alexandra Kenney (Milford) from Peru State College took first place in Client Services.

Other Top Ten Finishes: Second Place Winners-Madysyn Ayers (Minden), Reba Burgett (Humboldt), Anna Bauerle (Imperial), and Corbin Heller (Sidney) - Doane University - Parliamentary Procedure

Fourth Place Winners: Reba Burgett (Humboldt) - Doane University - Accounting for Professionals

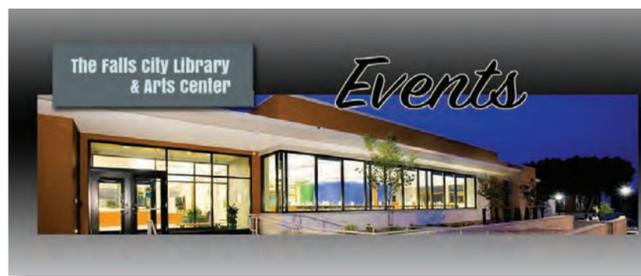

Tenth Place Winners: Rachael Cole (Wymore) and Lindsay Harlow (Dawson) - Peru State College - Local Chapter Annual Business Report

Other Finalists: Lindsay Harlow (Dawson) - Peru State College - Financial Services

Other Recognitions: The Peru State College chapter was recognized as Hollis and Kitty Guy Gold Seal Chapters of Merit which recognizes outstanding chapters that have actively participated in projects and programs identified with the goals of FBLA-PBL. In addition, the chapter was awarded the Action Awareness Award.

In addition, State Adviser Ted L. Harshbarger assisted with the competitive events throughout the conference as part of the national awards program committee. He will begin a fourth term on the committee officially starting in September. Harshbarger has served as the state adviser for Nebraska PBL for 21 years.

Junk food

By Gerri Hunter

Decisions. We face them every day. We've all left a wheelbarrow full of bad decisions in our past. Ladies, do you remember the time you went to the junior high Spring Fling wearing white anklets and sandals? Guys of a certain age might remember attending a high school dance with too much of their dad's Brylcreem in their hair.

Decisions on food are tough these days. Our world consists of non-stop choices in snacks. We are feeling more and more guilty about letting go and eating the stuff we love. Doctors tell us to stop doing it because we're overweight.

We know that all the manufacturers put calorie and nutrition charts on the chip bags now. No one cares. We just want to get the product into our car or our home and start eating. We are well aware that we have made another bad choice. Not only did we put the snacks in the cart, but we watched the clerk ring them up in front of us. So, we had a moment to scream "stop" and tell the clerk we'd changed our minds about purchasing the naughty items. Yes, we will have to walk or run extra miles in our neighborhood to get rid of the calories. It's worth it.. We want the right to enjoy our favorite junk food. We want to lick the salt and colored flavoring off our finger tips.

In the old day, the spicy, powdery stuff on chips ended up at the bottom of the snack bag. An edible adhesive, invented by chemists working in the snack world, has revolutionized our junk food. Now, the yummy coating sticks to the snack.

We all know how to glorify the chip eating experience. Chip dip.

You can make your own or buy some. Let's be honest. Don't bother dipping that chip and taking over an hour to get through the first carton of dip. Get out a handy utensil and push the dip in your mouth. It's been a lousy week at work and you deserve to eat an entire container of dip in one sitting.

Chocolate is another problem in stores; racks and racks of pleasure staring at you: Nougat or non-nougat; 65, 80, or 95 percent pure chocolate per bar. Do you want pecans, almonds or hazelnuts mixed in? Does sea salt, cayenne pepper or orange extract strike your fancy? You can choose white, dark, or milk chocolate.

Sugary drinks are another downfall for most people. Colorful cans with an array of caloric decisions for you to make. Some have 1 calorie per can. Others have ten and some have none.

Every time I buy a large bag of snacks at a store, I walk to my car with my head hanging like a guilty prisoner on the way to the gallows. With each step I take, I see my doctor's face and he is frowning and saying, "bad decision."

Rural people will have fewer insurance choices next year

"Thinking About Health," is part of the Nebraska Press Association's partnership with Rural Health News Service, which will provide Nebraskans with unbiased health-related information, designed to help better understand the health issues facing our communities, state and nation.

As Obamacare approaches its fifth sign-up season, policyholders in many parts of the country are facing a marketplace with fewer choices and higher premiums.

A New York Times analysis has found that 45 percent of U.S. counties probably will have either just one insurer or no insurers to choose from. That means some 3 million people in nearly 1,400 counties might have only one carrier and about 35,000 people could have none.

Many of those counties are in rural states like Nevada, Colorado, Wyoming, Nebraska, Ohio, Kentucky, Missouri, Mississippi, and North Carolina.

In dollars and cents that means those living in areas without a carrier must buy coverage in the regular marketplace where they will get no subsidies to help pay their premiums. Subsidies are available only for people buying Obamacare policies on the state shopping exchanges. About 85 percent of the 12 million Americans with Obamacare policies get subsidies, which make it possible to afford coverage.

For people with a single carrier in their county, limited options could mean high premiums for the policies available. "Blue Cross is out of Wisconsin, Indiana, Iowa, and Nebraska," says Washington D.C. insurance consultant Robert Laszewski. "In Tennessee Blue Cross is out of two major cities and for the carriers staying in, the rate increases are through the moon." The carrier will also be out of Ohio next year, a state where it had been a major insurer.

This is not exactly the outcome that supporters of Obamacare had hoped for. The politicians who wrote the law and its advocates tried to defy the basic laws of insurance. They wanted to keep the private insurance market and still allow everyone sick or well to get coverage. In other words, Obamacare tried to square the circle.

But insurers make money by selling to healthy people while trying to minimize the claims they get from the sick. The ACA called for insurers to issue policies to everyone regardless of their health status. That meant thousands of very ill people came into the risk pool, and in many areas not enough healthy people signed up for coverage to balance them out. Laszewski noted that only 40 percent of eligible people signed up, a recipe for trouble in too many counties.

"The most difficult place to make the marketplace work is in rural areas," says Timothy McBride, a health policy professor at Washington University in St. Louis. "It's an intractable problem in some places," largely because rural communities have low populations, and the percentage of unhealthy people tends to be higher than in the cities. "Policymakers were hoping they'd get this fixed, but they haven't been able to do that."

Many carriers leaving the market, however, are blaming the Trump administration for causing market uncertainty. A press release from Blue Cross Blue Shield announcing a 21 percent rate increase in the parts of Tennessee where it will continue to sell noted "two significant uncertainties." How will the risk pool change if the requirement to buy insurance is no longer enforced? (The Trump administration has loosened enforcement.) Will the government continue providing cost-sharing subsidies to people with low incomes? This year individuals with incomes below $30,000 and a family of four with about $62,000 get extra help paying deductibles and coinsurance.

I have no clue how politicians will solve this. I do know one thing: The cost of medical care continues to rise and that will be factored into everyone's premiums each year. Unless there's some serious cost control built into whatever comes out of Washington, premium increases could become very steep in the coming years taking health insurance out of reach for many Americans.

Cost containment has barely been discussed. It's the elephant in the room. For one thing, insurers' operating costs, which eat up about 18 cents of every premium dollar, are about twice as high as those costs in other countries. They include: determining eligibility, processing claims, enforcing controls on care like preauthorizing procedures - and negotiating fees with thousands of hospitals, doctors, and other sellers of care.

Then there's the matter of new healthcare technology and more use of older technology, which may account for as much as 50 percent of the increase in annual healthcare costs.

At the end of June, for example, the New York Legislature passed a law mandating insurers pay for 3-D mammography without requiring women to pay deductibles or coinsurance and without the blessing of the U.S. Preventive Services Task Force which has made clear that evidence for its use is lacking and "many important questions remain." The cost of a mammogram could rise by a third.

This is just the tip of the proverbial iceberg. I will explore technology and its costs in a future column.

How to keep kids engaged over school breaks

Children in North America will spend, on average, more than 900 hours attending school in a given year. The average school year in the United States lasts 1,016 hours, the equivalent of 42 continuous days. According to the Organization for Economic Cooperation and Development, many developed countries begin their academic years in September and end them in June. Some, like Australia, feature four terms with two-week breaks in between each term. Others go to school for most of the year — with various holiday breaks in between — and then get the bulk of their time off during the summer.

As much time as kids spend in school, there will be times when they are left to their own devices, and during these times it's easy for them to forget classroom lessons. Sometimes called "summer learning loss" or "summer slide," this forgetfulness sees many students fail to retain all of their lessons over prolonged breaks from school. Studies indicate that students score lower on standardized tests at the end of the summer compared to their performance on the same tests at the beginning of summer. Anywhere from between one to three month's worth of educational achievement can dissipate during prolonged breaks from the classroom. To help ensure that those hard-earned lessons are not so easily forgotten, parents can help children remain intellectually engaged in various ways over school breaks.

Stick to a schedule. Try to maintain a schedule similar to school, with children waking at the same time each day and going to bed at similar hours. This will make it much easier to get back into a routine when a new school year begins.

Encourage reading. Set aside time for reading each day. All it generally takes is 15 to 30 minutes of reading per day for kids to remember their vocabulary lessons and maintain their fluency and comprehension skills. Children may enjoy picking their own books rather than having a required reading list.

Keep a math book handy. On long car trips or rainy days, children can do a few math problems to keep their skills sharp. This will help keep learning loss to a minimum. Math workbooks may be available at bookstores, or parents can look online or ask a teacher for a summer to-do packet.

Plan educational trips. Vacations and day trips can be fun, entertaining and educational all at the same time. Science centers, museums and living history locations can bring to life information learned in the classroom, even on family vacations.

Learn at camp. Many children attend camp for a portion of their school breaks. Look for camps that do not simply babysit children, but engage them through enrichment activities.

Take a class. Children and families can learn together by exploring new skills. Enroll in something educational and enjoyable, such as a music or dance class, a STEM seminar or something else that engages the mind and body. This gives everyone a chance to learn something new and have a great time together as a family.

Parents and educators can reduce lesson loss over school breaks by encouraging families to remain intellectually engaged in any way they can.

Lukas Holladay of rural Reserve, KS honored.

Holladay achieves rank of Eagle Scout

Lukas Holladay of Rural Reserve, KS was recently awarded the Eagle Court of Honor. Lukas is the son of Brett Holladay and Ulrike Gass Holladay, of Frankfurt Germany.

Lukas' Eagle Court of Honor was attended by friends and family. His mother's family made the trip from Germany to witness the ceremony. D.P. Jones orchestrated the event and was instrumental in helping Lukas and many other young men achieve Eagle. There were numerous past Eagles in attendance as well including Tim Connell, who was the guest speaker and other Scouts from Troop 396, Falls City who aided in the elaborate ceremony.

In attendance were other family Eagle Scouts: father Brett Holladay and Grandfather Jim Holladay. The generational factor plays a large part in encouraging the journey towards Eagle.

The rank of Eagle is a coveted and rare achievement. It takes a young man many hours and skills to achieve. Life skills like CPR, basic first aid, marksmanship, leadership in the community and nation, orienteering, community service project, physical fitness, swimming, life-saving, horsemanship, gardening, photography, camping, canoeing, archery, or anything that stimulates a young man's mind.

This is a unique accomplishment: four percent of the US population are Scouts. Of that four percent, only three percent earn the rank of Eagle. Ewing Kaufman, the owner of the Royals and Merriam Merrill Dow, once spoke at an Eagle Court of Honor. He stated that he will always offer an Eagle a chance in his businesses. It is one of the few places on a resume that asks if you are an Eagle. If you join the military, it asks specifically if you are an Eagle. If so, the young man advances a rank when he signs up. This is the first place that he can earn, in the adult world, a level of respect.

Lukas is currently at Army Basic Training at Ft. Jackson, NC as a 25N Nodal Network Systems Operator for the Kansas National Guard. He plans to go to college next year enrolling into a ROTC program to eventually getting his Commission as an Army Officer.

Once an Eagle, always an Eagle. Difficult trail worth traveled.

Beware of potential soybean pests, like grasshoppers, mites

By Gary Lesoing

As we move through the summer, there is always the risk of potential insect pests in soybeans. I've mentioned the threat of grasshoppers in soybeans.

With high numbers already, you need to continue to scout for heavy infestations and treat before they inflict an economic loss to your soybeans. If conditions do turn dry this summer, another pest that shows up in soybeans could be the two-spotted spider mite. Dry conditions magnify the impact of spider mites.

The bean leaf beetle is another pest that sometimes can cause economic damage to soybeans here in southeast Nebraska. If populations across a field average three beetles or more per sweep consider an insecticide treatment. If the bean leaf population is below this level, scout the field five days later. Injury to the soybeans usually occurs when beetles are feeding on the pods. I have not seen or heard of any reports of high populations in SE Nebraska, but we have had high populations of bean leaf beetles occur during this time of year in the past that have required chemical treatment to prevent economic loss.

While we have only had infestations severe enough for treatment a couple of years, it is important to keep an eye out for soybean aphids. If the summer is cooler than normal, soybean aphids could be a problem. Populations usually build up in southeast Nebraska in August. The current recommended economic threshold for late vegetative through R5 stage soybeans is 250 aphids per plant with 80% of the plants infested and populations increasing. Depending on economic conditions, this generally gives you about five to seven days to schedule treatment before populations reach economically damaging levels.

In 2011, we were invaded by an unusually looking caterpillar that caused some significant crop damage to soybeans late in the summer. The silver spotted skipper caused defoliation of soybeans in a number of fields. A few fields were almost completely defoliated by very high populations of this caterpillar. Some producers treated fields with insecticides, while others decided not to treat. I have not heard of any high numbers causing problems this year yet. The caterpillar has a yellow body, narrow neck and brown head with orange eyespots. It was very unusual looking, almost like some creature from outer space. These caterpillars come from eggs laid by a butterfly that has brownish-black wings with white spots on the underside of the wings. In 2011 we had thousands of these butterflies in the area with several questions about them.

If you have questions concerning any insect pest, contact me at the Nemaha County Extension office at (402) 274-4755.

State Chamber president responds to attacks on NE's job-creation incentives

Nebraska Advantage Act has spurred 22,000 new jobs, $10 billion in private investment, Kennedy reports

By Barry L. Kennedy, President
Nebraska Chamber of Commerce & Industry

As president of the Nebraska Chamber of Commerce and Industry, I must address a recent opinion column by statehouse correspondent J.L. Schmidt, who teamed up with southeast Nebraska farmer Dennis Schuster in a misleading attack on Nebraska's business incentives.

By using his column to support the call to end Nebraska's business incentives, Schmidt openly endorsed raising taxes on employers and job creators – including many who advertise in the newspapers that publish his column.

Both Schuster and Schmidt repeated the talking points used by those who advocate for expanded government spending. However, in their passion, both failed to note that business incentives are utilized by every state in the union. Incentives are a necessity if Nebraska is to remain competitive in a global economy.

Here are other key points Schuster and Schmidt didn't tell their readers:

- The Nebraska Advantage Act spurred private-sector commitments of roughly 22,000 new jobs and $10 billion of investments across the state through 2006, according to a 2015 state report. What other Nebraska program encourages this level of job creation? Without incentives, the Cornhusker State would often miss out on jobs and investment due to our high tax climate.

- The Nebraska Advantage Act is performance based. These incentives are delivered only after an eligible business meets the job and/or investment levels established by law.

- Incentives mean better pay for workers. A recent audit found that employees at Nebraska's incentivized businesses received higher-than-average wages in 12 of 15 economic sectors.

- Incentives boost small and rural business. A 2015 State Chamber analysis found that of the 535 businesses that had applied for Nebraska Advantage incentives, approximately 75% had fewer than 100 employees – and many were in rural counties.

If Nebraska wants to grow and diversify its economy while retaining more of its young people, business incentives must be supported and enhanced.

In the meantime, perhaps in a future column, Mr. Schmidt should examine the tax breaks and incentives received by critics of incentives, such as Dennis Schuster. As a farmer, Schuster is the recipient of generous tax breaks granted by Nebraska policymakers (not to mention a hefty amount of federal payments). Let's look at just three of those tax breaks for agriculture, using public data from the State Department of Revenue:

1. Ag Land Valuation: For decades, ag land has been given special treatment by Nebraska law. Currently, ag land is assessed at 75% of actual value rather than the 100% valuation faced by businesses and home owners. As a result, Nebraska's public schools, counties, cities and other property tax-collecting entities in 2016 received $400 million less than they otherwise would have. This "shortfall" in local tax collections is subsidized by other taxpayers. From 2006 through 2016, Nebraska ag land owners paid an estimated $2.77 billion less in property taxes than they otherwise would have, which likely incentivized many farm land buyers to "bid up" prices paid per acre.

2. Sales Tax Exemptions for Ag: No sector receives more in sales tax exemptions than agriculture. According to the Tax Commissioner's 2016 report, sales and use tax exemptions for agriculture cost the state an estimated $1,503,203,000 in lost revenue. Not included in this figure is the $15.6 million exemption for ag repair parts – an exemption supported by the Nebraska Chamber for competitive reasons – or the $34.5 million in lost revenue due to preferential registration and licensing fees for farm trucks.

3. Property Tax Credits for Ag: In 2016, ag land owners received nearly half of Nebraska's $204 million in property tax credits, which are funded by state income and sales taxes. This occurred despite that residential and business owners paid more than two-thirds (over $2.6 billion) of Nebraska's total property tax bill. This disparity will grow due to 2016 legislation that added $20 million in credits provided only to ag land owners.

When you add up the cost of these provisions, Nebraska ag land owners and producers in 2016 received over $4.5 billion in tax breaks – in just one year. That makes the state's business incentives look like a bargain by comparison, especially when considering the large number of jobs dependent on such incentives.

The purpose here is not to disparage tax breaks for agriculture. Instead, we are pointing out that both business and ag receive tax advantages created for one simple purpose – to level the playing field in a state with a very high tax climate.

Instead of undermining the business community, we hope Mr. Schmidt will help Nebraska devise practical solutions by offering ideas to slow the growth of government and reduce the tax burden for both businesses and individuals.

That's the only way our state will see true economic expansion.

Kade Bredemeier beats the throw to second base during the FC Juniors' 6-1 season-ending loss to Beatrice during last weekend's Class B Area 1 District Tournament held at SNC Field.

FC Juniors finish 10-14

By Brian McKim

On Friday evening the fifth seeded Blue Storm Juniors took on the fourth seeded team from Beatrice.

FC got on the board first with two runs in the top of the first inning. Kade Bredemeier led off the game getting hit by a pitch, then Drew Bippes singled to right field.

After two stolen bases, Del Casteel hit a hard shot to the second base-men, who booted the ball, allowing both runners to score. Beatrice got on the board in the bottom of the inning after two walks and a hit batter. A sac fly scored the runner from third, making it 2-1 FC. The score would stay that way until the bottom of the fourth when Beatrice used a walk, a wild pitch, a fielder's choice and a single to tie the game at two.

Beatrice took the lead for good in the sixth inning when, with two outs and a runner at first, they used a wild pitch and a walk, followed by a base hit, to take the lead. The next batter then singled scoring two more runs.

FC went down 1-2-3 in the seventh, to fall 5-2 to Beatrice. Casteel went 1-3 with 2 RBI to lead FC. Collin Cook pitched three innings, giving up two hits and one run. Tyler Witt threw one inning, allowing three hits and three runs. He took the loss.

On Saturday night in an elimination game, FC ran past Fairbury, 12-4. FC got five runs in the first inning. The Blue Storm used a single, a walk, another single and a walk by Braden Oliver to drive in the first run. Next, Zack Beaver had a hit to make it 2-0.

Phoneix Martin and Cade Schawang were each was hit by pitches and scored, making it 4-0. Cook stole home for a fifth run. Fairbury got two runs in the third, but FC came right back with six runs in the bottom of the frame on four singles, a double, a walk and another hit batsman.

Bredemeier went 3-4 and scored 3 runs, Casteel was 2-3 with three RBI and Schawang was 1-for-2 with 3 RBI. Bredemeier threw 87 pitches and went the full 7 innings, giving up seven hits and four runs while striking out three.

The win Saturday set up a rematch with Beatrice. The Blue Storm season came to an end with a 6-1 loss as Beatrice was too much to handle.

Falls City scored first and took a 1-0 lead into the third inning. Drew Bippes reached first on a dropped third strike, Casteel followed it up with a double to right, and Oliver hit a sac fly to right, scoring Bippes for FC's lone run. Beatrice came back with two in the fourth and four more in the bottom of the sixth.

Casteel was 2-for-3 at the plate with a double. Bippes went 5 1/3 innings on the mound, giving up six runs (five earned) on just five hits, to go along with five strikeouts. Zack Hoffman pitched all seven innings for Beatrice, yielding just three hits while fanning eight.

With the loss FC finished the season with a 10-14 record.

Teaching for $35 a month

The Omaha Daily Bee noted on October 3, 1903, that Nebraska's corps of rural school teachers was changing, both in the relative percentages of men and women teachers and in the rates of pay awarded to members of each group. To modern readers, the article reveals much about attitudes of the time. The Bee noted:

"The country schoolmaster is fast passing away, says the Lincoln Star, and in his stead is appearing more and more each year, the country school ma'ams. Superintendent [William K.] Fowler has been investigating the matter and finds that the percentage of male school teachers in the state has decreased. . . . The percentage has been falling since 1871 at the rate of 1 per cent per year and in a few years the schoolmaster will be a historical memory only"

"The remarkable difference between the salaries paid men and women teachers is largely the fault of the women themselves. The high schools of the state turn out about 2,800 new teachers each year. These young women are entirely unexperienced and as a result work for almost nothing the first year or two to gain experience. . . ."

"Women are the best teachers, and many a woman teacher working for $35 per month is more valuable to her school district than the man teacher in the adjoining one drawing $55 per month. A man has not the patience with the little ones that is an absolute requirement of successful teaching, and the day has passed when a pugilist is required to preside over the little red schoolhouse. Women are driving the men from this field of employment, and are conquering by kindness where formerly only brute force would prevail."

Are you ready to trust and follow the 'Game Changer?'

Pastor Brian Voos
NorthRidge FC

How convinced do you have to be of something in order to give your life for it? That was the question Jesus' disciples faced after Jesus' death and resurrection. Prior to the resurrection, they were not convinced. They all scattered in fear when Jesus was put to death. Even Peter, the bold one, ran scared and denied Christ.

In fact, if you struggle to believe the resurrection of Jesus Christ really happened, you are in good company. None of his closest friends believed it happened...until the "Game Changer!" What was the Game Changer? The Game Changer was personal time in the presence of Jesus Christ alive again after his death. If you want a great true story, read John 20 and the story of Thomas.

Thomas, one of Jesus' 12 best friends doubted the whole thing and said, "Unless I see and touch his hands and place my hand into his side, I will never believe." (v.25) Imagine that, one of Jesus best friends saying, "I will never believe."

If you are struggling with belief, you are not alone. Ask Jesus to show himself to you. Ask for faith, and he will give it to you. Jesus showed up in person and Thomas touched his hands and his side, and Thomas said, "My Lord and my God!" Thomas' life was changed because of this encounter of the risen Christ! Today, although we cannot be with Christ physically, we can encounter him in a real way through his Spirit, his Word, and through the fellowship of other believers.

After spending time with Jesus after he was resurrected, the disciples were convinced that Jesus was worth trusting and following. Jesus is the "Game Changer." How convinced are you? Are you ready to trust and follow the "Game Changer?"

Hear, Ye!
We can listen but not hear.
We can hear but not understand.
Often, spouses complain about that.
When our Lord speaks, we triumph when we listen.
We overcome when we really hear the Lord.
Listen carefully to the Lord this week in church.
Let anyone with ears listen!

How to avoid hot weather auto breakdowns

When the weather warms, many people take to the outdoors to enjoy the sunshine and rising temperatures. Summer road trips or vacations are the norm, but it is important to realize that hot weather can take its toll even on a new, well-maintained vehicle.

High temperatures can cause all sorts of damage to a vehicle, from zapping battery power to overtaxing the cooling system. Recognizing potential hot-weather risks and performing routine checks on the vehicle are the keys to keeping vehicles in top form.

Battery: Excessive heat can shorten the life of a battery because it causes battery fluid to evaporate more quickly. This, in turn, can damage the internal structure of the battery. AAA reports that car battery issues are the most common breakdown calls.

It's a good idea to top off a battery with distilled water if it is the kind that requires it. Low-maintenance batteries may not have filler caps and will not require water. Inspect the battery for corrosion and leakage of battery acid. This could be a sign that the battery is getting old and will need to be replaced.

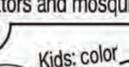

Cooling system: Cooling systems work hard to keep the flow of air to the engine and prevent it from overheating during warm seasons. Compromised cooling fans or lack of coolant can be troublesome. To avoid overheating, check coolant levels before getting on the road. In addition, have the cooling system checked by a trained mechanic prior to the summer driving season. It's a small price to pay to avoid extensive engine damage from overheating.

Tires: Hot weather causes the pressure inside of tires to rise. Overinflated tires can wear down prematurely or result in blowouts. The Car Care Council recommends checking tire pressure routinely in the summer, when tires are cold. Follow the guidelines in the owner's manual for recommended air pressure. Look for improper tread wear, weak spots or other tire damage that may end up causing flats.

Fluid levels: Hot weather can put extra demand on all fluids and engine components. Check transmission fluid, power steering fluid, brake fluid, and engine oil levels. Top off or change when necessary.

Pack with breakdowns in mind
Plan ahead for potential summer breakdowns by bringing along water, snacks, sunscreen, and an emergency medical kit. Be sure mobile phones are fully charged and that the number of a tow service or roadside assistance crew is entered into your list of contacts in the event of an emergency.

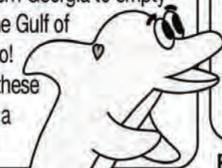

With warm-weather road trips beckoning, it's time to plan accordingly to prevent breakdowns that can derail fun.

What might you see in swamps?      Birds, snakes, alligators and mosquitoes.

Newspaper Fun!

I live in the ocean. I meet my "swampy" friends at the mouth of the Suwannee River, whose waters flow from the Okefenokee Swamp in southern Georgia to empty into the Gulf of Mexico! Look these up on a map!

Have you ever heard of a biome? It is a community of plants and animals that have adapted to their environments – such as a desert or a wetland. Wetland biomes are often found inside of another biome such as a rainforest. A wetland is wet most of the year. It hosts plants and animals that can live in its wet soil and shallow water. Water, mud, plants and living creatures make up the wetlands. There are many fascinating things to see in swamps, bogs, marshes and fens. If you explore these areas, be careful. A wetland with a boardwalk is safest!

Wetlands!

Read the clues to fill in the crossword puzzle:

- wetlands have _____ above the surface of the soil at least part of the year
- wetlands have fresh water, salt water or a mix of both called _____ water
- wetlands have a large variety of plants and animals; this _____ of life makes wetlands important to preserve
- about half of U.S. birds nest or _____ in wetlands
- as water flows through a wetland's soil, harmful materials are _____ out by plant life; cleaner water returns to nearby ponds, rivers, lakes, oceans and the underground "water table"
- like a sponge, wetlands absorb and hold a lot of water; may take on millions of gallons of extra water, thereby stopping _____
- some wetlands only appear in the fall or _____, when the weather allows water to build up
- this wetlands ecosystem becomes flooded during wet seasons or high tides; see cattails, cranes, reeds, muskrats
- _____ is an ecosystem similar to a marsh, but it can support trees such as red maples or cottonwoods; other plants like pussy willows
- the _____ gets its water from rain or snowfall; soil contains few nutrients, which is perfect for peat and sphagnum moss
- a _____ gets some water from mountain streams; water picks up nutrients as it moves; supports plant life – grass, sedge, rushes
- world's largest tropical wetland is the _____ of Brazil, Bolivia and Paraguay; 75,000 square miles in the center of South America
- wetlands are everywhere except _____; soil there isn't wet, but frozen; not enough plants to support a wetland
- most famous wetland in the U.S. is the Florida _____; people say the sawgrass there is so sharp that it can cut through clothes

Sometimes swamps in the southeastern area of our country are called bayous. Each word in the list is a clue to a famous swamp's name. Fill in the missing letter of each word to spell it correctly.

Protect health in extreme heat

Following the heat advisory issued by the National Weather Service for southeastern Nebraska, the U.S. Department of Health and Human Services (HHS) reminds local residents about steps they should take to protect their health from the extreme heat.

People suffering from heat stress may experience heavy sweating; weakness; cold, pale, and clammy skin; fast, weak pulse; and nausea or vomiting. Early signs include muscle cramps, heat rash, fainting or near-fainting spells, and a pulse or heart rate greater than 100.

People suffering from heat stress should be moved to a cooler location to lie down. Apply cool, wet cloths to the body especially to head, neck, arm pits and upper legs near the groin area where combined 70 percent of body heat can be lost; and have the person sip water. They should remain in the cool location until recovered with a pulse heart rate is well under 100 beats per minute.

Signs of the most severe heat-related illness, heat stroke, include a body temperature above 103 degrees Fahrenheit; hot, red, dry or moist skin; rapid and strong pulse; and altered mental status which can range from confusion and agitation to unconsciousness. Call 911 immediately and take steps to cool the person.

While children are especially vulnerable to heat illnesses, they may be unable to explain what is wrong but may act differently than usual. In extreme heat, consider changes in a child's behavior to be heat stress.

Similarly, people with communication-related disabilities may have difficulty expressing a heat-related problem. In extreme heat, look for a change in behavior as a sign of heat stress.

Older adults face additional risk of heat stress and heat stroke, for a variety of reasons. The National Institute on Aging's fact sheet explains more about how extreme heat can affect seniors.

To help prevent heat-related illness:

Spending time in locations with air-conditioning when possible.

Drink plenty of fluids. Good choices are water and diluted sport electrolyte drinks (1 part sport drink to 2 parts water) unless told otherwise by a doctor.

Choose lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing.

Limit outdoor activity to morning and evening hours.

As air conditioning use increases, electrical grids can become overwhelmed causing power outages. In power outages, people who rely on electricity-dependent medical devices, like oxygen concentrators, may need assistance so check on family members, friends and neighbors who use this type of equipment.

Community organizations and businesses can help local emergency managers and health departments plan for the community's health needs amid the summer heat – and other emergency situations that cause power outages – using the HHS emPOWER Map. The HHS emPOWER Map provides the monthly total number of Medicare beneficiaries' claims for electricity-dependent equipment at the national, state, territory, county, and zip code levels.

For more information about how to prevent heat-related illnesses visit the HHS public health emergency preparedness website at <http://emergency.cdc.gov/disasters/extremeheat/>. For information about how to better prepare for disasters and other emergencies, visit www.ready.gov.

HHS' mission is to enhance and protect the health and well-being of all Americans and fulfills its mission by providing for effective health and human services and fostering advances in medicine, public health, and social services. ASPR leads HHS in preparing the nation to respond to and recover from adverse health effects of emergencies, supporting communities' ability to withstand adversity, strengthening health and response systems, and enhancing national health security.
