‘Trick-or-Treating in the Burbs’

November 1, 1958

It's Halloween again — batten down the hatches and everything else, folks. In artist John Falter's dreadful scene, Mrs. Oldwitch and five little creeps are out on a shake-down cruise, Tricks or Treats! — so house-holders stock up on candy, and expeditions that get around early before the supplies peter out amass enough loot to do their stomachs no good at all. In the bad old days, Halloweening was a livelier art; do you recall, Grandpa, the night you rigged up lawyer Grump's garden hose so it was aimed at his front door, rang his bell, turned on the water, and he got it right in the beeper? Do you recall that when you returned to swipe his gate, he ran out and began flailing around recklessly with a buggy whip? The good new days inflict less pain on all concerned.

EDGE awards to be conferred upon FC's leaders

Falls City EDGE has announced the launching of two new community-based awards — the Millennial Community Builder Award and the Wall of Fame — and winners of this inaugural year will be recognized at the EDGE Annual Banquet Jan. 13, 2016.

The 2016 Millennial Community Builder Award will recognize a young person between the ages of 15-30 years of age who is making extraordinary contributions to their community via leadership and volunteer efforts.

"We are looking for those who believe in their community and special consideration will be given to those young individuals who have made Falls City or Richardson County their home or plan to in the future," EDGE Director Beckie Cromer said.

The winner will be recognized with a personalized crystal award.

The Wall of Fame nominees must have made significant contributions in Falls City or Richardson County in the areas of volunteerism, leadership and philanthropic activity.

"These deserving individuals have been role models for citizens and were instrumental in making Falls City the passionate, proven and prosperous community we enjoy today," Cromer said. "We will look to install between one and 10 nominees in this first year and nominations will be accepted post-

The website wikiHow explains how a person should act if by chance they meet their favorite rock star or celebrity.

"If you want to impress your favorite celebrity without sounding like a swooning fan...you have to be cool, calm, collected and interesting in order to make a positive impression on them," it reads. Sure wish I had read wikiHow before I bumped into Nikki Sixx at a gas station following a Motley Crue concert a few years back. I stared at him for a while and mumbled something about "kicking ass." Couldn't have been the "positive impression" wikiHow refers to, because he won't even accept me as one of his 1,369,936 Facebook friends.

THINKING ABOUT HEALTH

Seniors to face higher Medicare premiums, deductibles next year

By Trudy Lieberman, Rural Health News Service

The last couple of weeks have brought unexpected and unwelcome news to millions of seniors and disabled people on Medicare. Their already high out-of-pocket costs are going to get higher. For some, premiums for Medicare Part B coverage that pays for doctor and outpatient services will go up as much as 52 percent. For everyone, Part D premiums, which cover drug benefits, will increase an average of 13 percent, and everyone will see their annual Part B deductible rise from $147 to $223.

These are not trivial amounts considering that half of all people on Medicare are living on annual incomes of $24,150 or less. In 2010 about 7 million people covered by the program lacked supplemental insurance such as Medigap policies, which cover what Medicare doesn't. By 2013 the number of people without the additional coverage had more than doubled, most likely because they couldn't afford to buy it.

What's going on here? Weren't Medicare's costs supposed to go down thanks to the Affordable Care Act? These increases have nothing to do with Obamacare and everything to do with the laws governing Medicare and Social Security.

Each year the Secretary of Health and Human Services examines the spending for Part B services which actually has risen this past year. By law premiums paid by everyone on Medicare must cover 25 percent of the program's cost. (General tax revenues cover 75 percent.) And each year the Social Security Administration determines the cost-of-living increases for seniors based on the Consumer Price Index. There will be no increase for the coming year.

All this means about 30 percent of beneficiaries will see increases for Part B. Most people have their premiums deducted from their Social Security checks, but the law prohibits any Part B premium increase that would result in a reduction in their Social Security benefits. Without a COLA increase, a higher premium means a smaller Social Security check.

Because Medicare premiums must cover 25 percent of Part B costs, the government has to find the money somewhere. So four groups of people will have to shoulder the added financial burden.

They include those who begin receiving Medicare benefits in 2016, those over age 65 who are on Medicare but who have not taken their Social Security benefits yet; wealthier beneficiaries (individuals with incomes above $85,000 and couples with $170,000) and low-income people eligible for both Medicare and Medicaid. State Medicaid programs pay those increases and they, too, are grumbling.

Increases in Part D premiums stem from higher costs for both brand and generic prescriptions and particularly for specialty drugs like Sovaldi to treat hepatitis C.

Will Congress fix these inequities and find other funds to protect everyone from these increases? "It's very hard to predict what Congress will do," says Tricia Newman, senior vice president at the Kaiser Family Foundation. Newman points out this year's higher premiums and deductibles may be temporary and are expected to come down in 2017.

The other day I explained all this on a New York City radio show along with Joe Baker who heads the Medicare Rights Center, which helps beneficiaries from all over the country understand their options. Callers on fixed incomes and tight budgets drove home the point: The increases will pinch. One woman told of a $300 rent increase she had to absorb along with higher prices for food and medicines.

Another said her husband had cancer, and the family had been socked with high medical costs. She said they had to pay a $3,000 deductible before insurance kicked in. Most likely she meant the requirement to pay $3,000 out of pocket before her Medicare Advantage plan pays benefits. That's a common out-of-pocket limit for these types of plans. Even if she didn't label the source of the problem correctly, she knew the family budget was in trouble.

That led to a discussion of the how the COLA adjustment is calculated and whether it is fair to seniors because they spend money on a different market basket of goods than younger Americans do. They spend more on health care, for example, and less on gasoline, which is heavily factored into the cost-of-living calculations. But despite years of talk and experiments with a more accurate cost of living index for seniors, the government has yet to implement one.

Years ago, health care expert Marilyn Moon, who served as a public trustee of the Social Security and Medicare Trust Funds, urged Americans to save their money because they were going to need it for medical care when they got older. This year's situation shows how right she was.

A website to avoid. Just stumbling onto it cost me a couple IQ points.

You want to impress your favorite rock star? Cut a good record. That's what Chase Thompson, with a little help from his friends, did - and, viola, now they're opening for The Story So Far, a popular pop-punk band they've hero-worshipped since junior high.

Thompson, singer/songwriter who cut his first EP in Ohio in May with the help of Citizen's Mat Kerekes, and fellow FC natives Brent Scott Maze, a senior at UNL, and Vince Dean, a freshman at Nebraska, as well as drummer Evan Fisbeck. The quartet make up Everything Breathes and they've taken deep breaths of The Story So Far for years, buying all their music and going to their shows, such as those on the Vans' Warped Tour. Hence Thompson was bowled over when band members contacted Kerekes after listening to the new tracks and requested Thompson, who plays guitar and sings, and company open for them this Thursday at the Bourbon Theatre in downtown Lincoln. Basement and Turnover are also on the bill.

"Mat called me because their guitarist had sent him a text asking about us," Thompson said. It's so insane. This is our first show - what a way to start out!"

Last spring, Dean, Thompson and his family were off to Toledo, OH, for a week to record in Kerekes' home studio. Thompson had more material than one single, but not enough to create a full-length album, so he made the five-song self-titled EP in Kerekes' home studio. A music video for the debut single "Crawl" stars Dean and was directed, shot and edited by Maze. It is available on YouTube. Everything Breathes has a Facebook page, as well. Basically, everything Everything Breathes, at least on this EP, is Thompson.

"I recorded most of it, but Vince plays some leads on the record and he plays the ukulele and also does back up vocals," Thompson said.

Thompson has played acoustic solo shows under his name, at Lincoln venues like Duffy's Tavern, which one time hosted a band named Nirvana, but said he'd rather perform with the full band.

Maze and Thompson have been playing music together for many years. Dean joined in four years ago and the boys have been making music ever since. Thompson writes all of the songs and sends them to the other members to listen and see if they like them

That audience of three is about to get a lot bigger Thursday. Don't forget to dress the part, fellas.

SEZ-I

When it comes to conflicts of interest, the Papio-Missouri River Natural Resources District has a pretty wicked sense of humor. While board members spent countless hours crusading to have me removed from office – as of this date, I have been fully exonerated by the courts and all charges have been dismissed due to a lack of evidence – they summarily dismiss a potentially real conflict-of-interest case. I'm referring to that of University of Nebraska Board of Regents member Hal Daub. This may surprise you, but Hal Daub is a partner in the law firm Husch-Blackwell – the same firm that was hired to represent the PMRNRD in 2009 to obtain bonding revenue for 27 dams proposed by the Papio Creek Watershed Partnership at a cost of $1 billion.

Mr. Daub has access to confidential and privileged PMRNRD information with respect to the project – information that could prove quite profitable if it ever reached the hands of certain property owners. Hal Daub, who represents a client that owns some of the property in the vicinity of Dam Site 15A. But, according to the PMRNRD's illustrious legal team made up of Husch-Blackwell attorneys, this is somehow not a conflict of interest! If that's not a conflict of interest, then what's the point of even having conflict-of-interest laws? It's like asking Jesse James' brother Frank, after Jesse has just robbed a bank, if Jesse's actions were in accord with the law. What would you expect the response to be?!

The PMRNRD is subsequently using taxpayer funds to pay for streets and other amenities on behalf of Hal Daub's client, yet that's perfectly acceptable. This is not even to mention the fact that the development is located near an area where the PMRNRD has simply decided to give public land away to the University of Nebraska at Omaha for an expanded prairie reserve. I wonder who brokered this deal. Could Hal Daub be using his influence as a regent, along with privileged information as a partner with Husch-Blackwell, to benefit his client? If so, then anyone with half a brain might call that a major conflict of interest.

Under normal circumstances, the newly formed SID would pay for streets and any infrastructure improvements. However, as it stands with this bogus special-interest agreement, which was signed by Daub's mayoral protégé – Jean Stothert – the PMRNRD will pay for these costs. Why must the taxpayers foot the bill for an SID? Moreover, the City of Omaha's promise to reimburse the PMRNRD for the SID's infrastructure costs at a later date is somewhat puzzling. Ask yourself, why would the City of Omaha agree to pay for a new street that's located outside of the city limits? And, second, where will the reimbursement revenue come from? Could it be that City of Omaha officials have been systematically lying to residents about where the increased fees associated with the $2 billion sewer separation project and/or the Legislature's Water Sustainability Funds? Could this be the reason why the City of Omaha did not include the multimillion dollar SID infrastructure project in its current budget – because the excessive sewer separation fees will ultimately be used to pay for its reimbursement, and the city's elected officials would sooner prefer that the voters not catch wind of the fact that their special-interest cronies are subject to a taxpayer bailout?

EAB moving closer to Nebraska

An invasive insect pest continues to move closer and closer to Nebraska: Emerald Ash Borer. EAB has not been found in the state, but has been verified as close as the Kansas City area.

EAB is a wood-boring insect that is one-half inch long and is a metallic green color with bronze underneath the wings. The problem with Emerald Ash Borer is that it bores into healthy ash trees. We have many native borer species, but they feed on stressed or dying trees, that is what makes EAB so much worse than normal borers and it is why it is destroying so many trees.

EAB is an insect that was first found in the U.S. in 2002, when it was found killing ash trees in southeast Michigan. Currently, EAB has been found in 25 states including Iowa, Missouri, Kansas and Colorado.

EAB feeds only on true ash trees, which means that mountain ash is not attacked because it is in a different family and is not a true ash tree. Ash trees have opposite, compound leaves with 5-11 leaflets. They have paddle-shaped seeds that stay on the tree through the fall and into the winter months. EAB has also recently been found on Fringe Tree, which is a tree in the same family as ash, but is not very common in Nebraska.

The signs of EAB infestation include suckering at the base of an ash tree, decline in the tree from the top of the canopy downward through the tree, 1/8 inch D-shaped exit holes along the trunk and branches, increased woodpecker damage, S-shaped Serpentine galleries underneath the bark of the tree. If you notice any of these symptoms in your ash tree, you should contact your local Nebraska Extension Educator.

Treatments are not recommended until the insect is found within 15 miles of the tree’s location. There are chemical treatments that are effective against EAB. Homeowners can use a soil application, but this is most effective on trees less than 15 inches in trunk diameter. If the tree is larger, professional tree care companies can use a trunk injection. Wait until the insect is found within 15 miles before any treatment is done because the injections wound the tree and we want to wait as long as we can before we begin wounding our trees. A homeowner should also decide if the tree is in good health and a good location before beginning treatments. Planting ash trees at this time is not recommended.

Buy wood locally when camping and leave unburned firewood at the campsite when you leave.

If you have any questions please contact Nicole Stoner at (402) 223-1384, nstoner2@unl.edu

A pedestrian sued an automobile driver for more than $50,000 in District Court as the result of an accident at 18th and Stone Streets, where the pedestrian was painfully injured after being struck by a car.

A Cuban refugee was arrested after he tried to hijack an airliner in Key West, FL., to rescue his family waiting in Cuba.

Stella's Tiger football team was near the .500 mark for the season with a 14-0 win over Nemaha.

Seven-year-old Lisa Clark was struck by an automobile and suffered a fractured skull. Her condition was described as "quite good."

Harum Scarum, starring Elvis Presley, was being shown at the Rivoli.

A "Go Big Red" banner was stretched across Harlan Street for Nebraska fans who headed through Falls City for the Nebraska-Missouri game. Unfortunately, the wind didn't cooperate, and blew the banner down.

Miss Teen America Colette Daiute, advised shaggy-haired young men to pay a visit to the barber shop.

A couple of ladies painted a message to servicemen in Vietnam on a helicopter rotor blade: "For the boys in Vietnam, from the girls at Bell."

A spider caused Diana Meinzer to hit a light pole with her vehicle. She lost control of the vehicle when she tried to kill the eight-legged menace. Miss Meinzer was not injured.

25 Years Ago

History was made when both the FC High and FC Sacred Heart football teams hosted state playoff games at Jug Brown Stadium. The Tigers, which finished 9-1, fell 6-0 to Wahoo, which was led by All-Class All-Stater Jason Glock and eventual Husker offensive lineman Steve Volin. FCSH defeated Bradshaw 52-6 to advance.

WASP workers, with Junior Strasil and his winch truck, positioned the 75-foot flagpole into place at WASP's new plant. The pole, Falls City's tallest, was designed and constructed right there at WASP.

Francis Ford Coppola announced a third Godfather film would be hitting theaters on Christmas Day.

Southeast Consolidated' Outstanding Students for October were: Sandy Alexander, Tracy Dunn, Tate Jacobitz and Darcey Jacobitz.

More than 1,200 pounds of aluminum cans were collected during the Utility Department's Aluminum Can Recycling Contest. The cans brought in over $400, which was donated to the FC Educational Foundation to go towards repairs of Jug Brown Stadium.

15 Years Ago

Dana Dill was crowned FC High Homecoming King and Sarah Baker Queen.

Tanya Hinrichsen, a sophomore at Dawson-Verdon, was selected to attend the Hugh O'Brian Youth Leadership Conference.

Sophomore QB Matt Sells and FC Sacred Heart came from behind to beat No. 7 Johnson-Brock, and remain undefeated, moving on to the Class D1 playoffs.

Halloween was no treat for some Falls City homeowners who dealt with shenanigans and who woke up the day after to stolen items and broken glass and pumpkins.

Journal Athletes of the Week were Shane Vollmer of FC High and A.J. Ahern of FCSH.

The Journal featured photos of some adorable kids during the Halloween parade, none more adorable than "Tinkerbell" here. Though Preston Deckinger was a pretty cute "Woody" from Toy Story and Libby Schawang was a darling "Dorothy" from The Wizard of Oz.

TODAY IN HISTORY

On this day 30 years ago, the KC Royals defeated St. Louis to win the 1985 World Series. KC battled back from a 3-1 deficit against the Cardinals, just as it did in the ALCS against Toronto. That team remains the only one in history to overcome two 3-1 deficits in a single postseason.

Highest-grossing horror films perfect for Halloween night

Are you a scary movie buff? Do you relish in the building music and the jump-out-of-your-seat moments that unleash from you a primal scream? Many people share a love of scary movies and have made the horror genre one of the most popular.

No month of the year celebrates horror movies more than October. Each October, movie theaters, television stations and viewers count down to Halloween with flick after flick featuring gore, suspense and pure horror.

Many horror movies were inspired by classic literature, including works from Edgar Allan Poe, Mary Shelley, Bram Stoker, and Gaston Leroux. Horror films often incorporate mystery, suspense, supernatural elements, and fantasy in addition to themes that play on viewers’ fears. Evil creatures, witches, zombies, serial killers, and many additional nasty characters may appear in horror films.

Horror film fans can trace scary movies’ origins back to the late 19th century. Some credit silent film pioneer George Méliés with creating the first horror movie, which was titled “La Manoir du Diable (The Manor of the Devil).” Japanese filmmakers also were instrumental in popularizing the horror genre.

Popular literary characters, from Dracula to Dr. Frankenstein’s monster to Mr. Hyde to Quasimodo, have appeared in horror movies. Many horror movies have focused on the end of the world and the occult. Psychological horror movies also have proven quite popular with audiences, as have slasher movies, which became quite popular in the 1980s and 1990s.

Many horror movie fans have a favorite subgenre, but many also will gladly watch any flick that puts a scare in them. Some horror movies have had more box office success than others, and the following are some notable horror movies that put a scare in viewers and some dollars in their producers’ pockets (figures courtesy of the Internet Movie Database).

- “World War Z” ($202 million): A zombie pandemic is set to cripple the world, and one man races against time to stop it.
- “What Lies Beneath” ($155 million): A woman believes her Vermont home is haunted by a ghost.
- “Gremlins” ($148 million): This tale of pets that boast some unusual qualities became a cultural phenomenon in the 1980s.
- “The Blair Witch Project” ($141 million): When three film students disappear after investigating the legend of the Blair Witch, their documented footage sheds light on their fate.
- “The Silence of the Lambs” ($131 million): Few filmgoers can forget Anthony Hopkins’ Oscar-winning turn as Hannibal “The Cannibal” Lecter, who works in conjunction with naive FBI cadet Clarice Starling (Jodie Foster) to catch a vicious killer on the loose.
- “The Ring” ($129 million): This film is a remake of a classic Japanese ghost story and made many viewers want to avoid their televisions after watching it.

Lions, Dr. McPeak remind parents toddlers’ eyes get checked at no cost

As part of the Lions Club International ongoing focus on vision, the Falls City Lions Club would like to remind the public of the “See To Learn” program.

See To Learn is sponsored by the Eye Care Council and has been available for more than 20 years. It offers free eye exams for all 3-year-olds, in order to detect vision conditions early. This can prevent learning delays and even possibly a permanent loss of vision.

There are two local offices that are members of the The Eye Care Council, including McPeak Optometry in Falls City. Dr. Eric McPeak has been a member since he arrived in FC in 2003.

Lifetime Vision Center in Auburn is a member as well.

Parents can call the either office and request to make a free appointment for their 3-year-old.

“I recommend all 3-year-olds receive a free ‘See To Learn’ exam to possibly catch a vision disorder before learning is delayed whatsoever,” Dr. McPeak, a Lions Club member, said.

“I have caught several vision problems with ‘See To Learn’ exams and I know these children are ahead of where they would have been had they not received that exam.” says Eric McPeak, OD and member of the Falls City Lions Club.

The ‘eyes’ have it:

- 80 percent of everything we learn is a result of visual processing;

- 4 percent of children have amblyopia (Amblyopia is when the eye doesn’t develop properly and is unable to see 20/20);

- Nearly 30 percent of children in special education classes have vision

See To Learn®

problems;

- The percentage of children with vision problems increases to 25 percent by age 10 and 30 percent at age 15;

- Vision problems in children can limit career opportunities as an adult;

- More than 70 percent of juvenile delinquents have vision problems;

- 20 percent of children entering kindergarten have undetected vision conditions that could hinder their ability to read and learn.

New collaboration committed to reducing death, disease associated with childbirth, 1st month of life

A new, statewide collaborative of health professionals, health organizations, hospitals and clinics has committed to reducing the death and disease associated with childbirth and the first month of life.

The Nebraska Perinatal Quality Improvement Collaborative’s initial efforts will focus on: reducing the number of first-time cesareans; increasing the numbers of new mothers who breastfeed; and conducting education to prevent and increase newborn screening for congenital cytomegalovirus, an infection that occurs before birth.

Through Legislative Bill 233, the Nebraska Legislature is funding the initiative with $100,000 a year for two years. The collaborative will provide resources to enable health professionals to provide care that will improve birth outcomes and reduce costs.

Support also comes from the March of Dimes, the Nebraska Medical Association, Arbor Health, Copic, University of Nebraska Medical Center Department of Pediatrics, Nebraska Medicine, the American Academy of Pediatrics, Methodist Women’s Hospital and CHI Health.

This year, Nebraska became the 44th state to form a collaborative. Members of the statewide collaborative will work closely with Nebraska organizations, including the NE Dept. of Health and Human Services, the Visiting Nurses Association, and county health departments.

“Our new collaborative will work to ensure that Nebraska will be a state where a great life starts with healthy moms and healthy babies,” said Ann Anderson Berry, M.D., Ph.D., co-medical director of the collaborative. “As health providers, we all share a common goal of providing care of the highest quality for our patients. Nebraska’s mothers and babies need and deserve the attention to quality care delivery given in other states that are already benefiting from the work of perinatal collaboratives.”

Dr. Anderson Berry is an associate professor of pediatrics at the University of Nebraska Medical Center and medical director of the Nebraska Medicine neonatal intensive care unit.

Robert Bonebrake, M.D., a perinatologist at Methodist Health System, is co-medical director of the collaborative and Peggy Brown, D.N.P., a women’s & children’s clinical quality lead at Nebraska Medicine, is program administrator for the collaborative.

“Our first initiative will support health professionals in their efforts to eliminate elective delivery in infants less than 39 weeks estimated gestational age. There are too many C-sections and resulting complications such as high wound infection rates and increased time in the hospital,” Dr. Anderson Berry said. “This is of great importance to women. It will result in fewer complications and less death.”

The group has a growing list of more than 90 percent of hospitals across the state committed to the project.

“It speaks greatly of the need and the impact it will have in Nebraska,” Dr. Bonebrake said. “Collaboratives improve health care practices and patient outcomes as well as reduce costs. We will use evidence-based medicine, which we know improves health outcomes and provides the highest quality care.”

Dr. Brown said the collaborative will share the most current and best practices. “The knowledge in medicine isn’t static. We have to constantly update, and it’s difficult to keep up with all these changes if you’re a provider trying to care for three or four communities. There are limited resources and challenges. Providers can adapt these practices to their own circumstances and build on their successes.”

Breastfeeding is another focus of the grant.

Dr. Anderson Berry said Nebraska is ranked 47th in rates of breastfeeding. She said if 60 percent of babies were fed exclusively with breast milk for the first six months of life, it could result in hundreds of thousands of dollars saved in health care costs in Nebraska.

“Increased rates of breastfeeding in the first year of life could prevent complications such as ear infections, pneumonias requiring hospitalizations, and colds -- because babies are getting some immunity protection from the mom,” Dr. Anderson Berry said. “If we keep babies well, parents miss less work, fewer antibiotics are used and health costs are reduced.”

Funding for the collaborative will pay for resources, database development, and statistical support, a program administrator with expertise in quality improvement as well as implementation and education costs. The state funding has potential for renewal.

Nebraska Statistics

-About 2,752 infants were born prematurely in Nebraska in 2013.

-According to research, the cost of care for preterm infants ranges from more than $100,000 for extreme prematurity to $4,500 for late prematurity.

-Very low birth weight infants are at risk for costly complications, adding $12,000 to $31,000 to their already expensive care.

-Prematurity is costly to Nebraska. Medicaid programs bear a large burden of this cost. Collaboratives have the ability to impact this, for example, in Tennessee, where a collaborative has been active for six years, they have saved $11 million a year in state funds.

Last year, $600 was raised for the local Cancer Fund and Chautauqua Night since its inception has generated more than $4,700 for local charities. The event is open to the public.

“We appreciate you sharing in this project with us,” FCMS language arts instructor Kory Huppert, who started it up in ‘14 as Rolling Stone singer Mick Jagger, said.
