Finding Me

By Lori Gottula

In the olden days, back when I was a kid, this would've been called "airing your dirty laundry." In today's age of sharing every detail of our lives on Facebook, most people would call it a status update. I prefer, however, to follow the lead of Good Morning America's Robin Roberts, and call it, "Making My Mess My Message." And since I had a really big mess, I also have a really big message.

I am one of the 100 million Americans who have fallen into the trap of chronic pain management. That means, unfortunately, that I am one of the tens of millions of Americans who have fallen into the bottomless pit of dependency on prescription painkillers.

I have battled chronic pain for more than 13 years. I've seen 13 specialists, and no one has been able to help me. My only answer has been to try to manage the pain. I did the only thing that even remotely touched it — I took prescription painkillers.

I never took more than the prescribed amount — my doctor made sure of that. I didn't doctor-shop or pharmacy-hop either. But I took the maximum amount every day for 12 years. I had no idea what I was doing to myself either. Like so many others who were just looking for relief, I became dependent. For the last three years, I have also been working on my first book, so I became a hermit as well. I didn't want to do anything else. I went out with friends periodically, but went home early, to work on the book and take my next pill. At bedtime, I couldn't sleep so I took a sleeping pill. I woke up three or four hours later, and couldn't go back to sleep, so I took another painkiller. I still couldn't sleep, so I was literally functioning (or trying to function) on three to four hours of sleep a night.

I had gained 90 pounds (yes, you read that right — ninety, not nine), and was lazy and so afraid of hurting myself that I didn't even try to do anything strenuous. My entire body was puffy and bloated, and I felt terrible all the time.

The worst part, however, was that the painkillers had changed my personality. Instead of being fun and playful, and energetic and outgoing, I had become angry and scared, lazy and lethargic. Most importantly, though, I had started to doubt myself. Instead of being the independent, confident person I had always been, I let people and situations beyond my control damage my self-esteem. I had never done that in my life. My life was spiraling out of control.

A life reboot needed

That was when I realized that I needed to do something to reboot my life. The only place I could start was with the painkillers. I made the decision to do something about it on Tuesday, Oct. 1st, and on Friday, Oct. 5th, I left for an inpatient

Several weeks ago in this space we reported that a number of nearby subscribers, including within our own county, were calling to say their papers were arriving late. We believe we now know why.

Previously, our papers were taken by truck to Lincoln for processing. That changed at the same time we began receiving "late" calls. Rather than the truck ride to Lincoln, the destination changed to Omaha. Coincidence? Unlikely. So at least we think we know where the problem is. We will make every effort to correct it, but we'll need the cooperation of Omaha Postal workers, some of whom seem not to regard a weekly newspaper very highly.

Curiously, I've heard from long-time subscribers in this general area (as far south as Kansas City) who have seen no change. So it appears to be kind of a hit or miss deal. Obviously, it's very frustrating.

A crew of men has taken on quite a challenge in the Journal's back room in the past several days, trying to dismantle and haul away the two-unit Goss Community offset press that printed the Journal beginning in 1974. The units have been idle since our printing needs were outsourced, first to Syracuse and then to Mound City. We were unable to find a buyer for our units and figured the space could be used for better purposes, thus the removal.

Frankly, given the way our Goss was put together, I think selling and moving it was never a viable option. The thing was built like a tank. But the guys have made progress as they work on a part-time basis.

When properly maintained, which it was for much of its life, thanks to the guy who operated it, the Journal's press was very reliable. But there were several anxious times early on-plus, when snafus resulted in piles (sometimes into the hundreds if not thousands) of unusable papers that eventually made it to the recycling center or found a place as dog pen liners. There were occasional electrical and other problems, but by-and-large, not that many.

From the time I started here in 1976, part of my job was to handle the papers as they rapidly came off the press. We'd all pitch in to stuff them if needed (our press could print 8 or less pages at a time; sometimes we needed more than 8 pages, thus a "double run" and count them for the carriers, while one or two employees would prepare them for the mail. Today, our paper is still stuffed, counted and prepared for the mail. We just don't print it.

It's kind of sad to see that old press torn down to a skeleton and headed for a likely scrap meltdown. Sometimes I wonder how many papers actually rolled through it. For a long time, when we published daily, including Saturdays, the number would have been north of 120,000 a week, every week, or 1,440,000 a year.

Monday was April 15, the day all procrastinators' procrastinating hit the tax deadline. I read a story by Melissa Dahl of NBC News that cited an expert who said between 20 and 25 percent of adults are procrastinators. Many of them were burning the pre-midnight oil last night, pencil and eraser in hand.

I'm usually included in that 20-25 percent (although just barely not on taxes this year). Ms. Dahl's story included several reasons for putting off until tomorrow what could have been done today, or months ago, for that matter. Procrastinators, she notes, are "less likely to be organized" and "self-disciplined." They might be "impulsive" or "easily distracted," or "perfectionists," who fear they will goof up on complicated chores (like filling out a tax form). Tax-wise, some put off filing because they know they'll owe money. In the extreme, some might even put off filing for a tax extension.

I was going to research what psychologists have to say about the subject of procrastination, but decided to do that tomorrow or the next day, maybe next week, or possibly in June or July. Come to think of it, sometime in 2014 might be more realistic.

And now, Nebraska's Dubious Achievement Award: The Filibuster

Capitol View By J.L. Schmidt Statehouse Correspondent Nebraska Press Association

Sixty percent of the allotted time for the legislative session has elapsed and lawmakers are talking about talking too much.

Veteran lawmaker Ernie Chambers has launched three filibusters (talking an issue to death) and promised others. Sen. Scott Lautenbaugh of Omaha recently burned 45 minutes of time explaining to his colleagues why they need to get the lead out - and then apologized for taking that much time. Speaker of the Legislature Greg Adams of York adjusted the daily schedule to include early to late evening floor debate much sooner than speakers have in the past.

As of the end of Day 55 (April 5) of the 90-day session, lawmakers had passed and the governor signed 72 bills. Another 36 have been killed, seven withdrawn. Seven measures are awaiting the third and final round before approval. Senators, committees and the Speaker have tabbed 104 bills as priorities. In regular years, those priority measures would have been the fodder for the rest of the session which must also see the drafting and approval of a two-year budget docu-

But, Lautenbaugh pointed out, this isn't a regular year. His Omaha colleague Bob Krist complained that this has been the slowest session of the five he has experienced. Lobbyists and observers of the process agree. Some say it's the return of the 75-year-old Chambers who sat out his mandatory four years as the result of term limits. So far this session he has prolonged debate on measures dealing with: betting on historic horse races; using work camp prisoners as volunteers with non-profit agencies; and a proposed study of Nebraska taxes.

The National Conference of State Legislatures in Denver says filibusters are rare in state Legislatures — except Nebraska's. Filibusters can be cut off with a simple majority of lawmaker votes in most states. "You pretty much never or hardly ever see them," Brenda Erickson, program principal for NCSL. "Most have limited session lengths, so you cannot afford to have truly unlimited debate."

Senator Bill Avery of Lincoln said Chambers can do a one-man filibuster by "clever use" of the rules - moving to reconsider a previous motion or amendment or bracket the bill. Each move allows Chambers to speak three times, each time for five minutes. Avery says there are all kinds of rules you can use to delay, and people have to yield you time, and you have to be able to do it without a bathroom

Back in 1992, the Legislature adopted Senate Rule 7.10, which allows for motions for cloture (to end debate) to be approved by a two-thirds majority (33 votes), so long as the speaker decides the bill has gotten a "full and fair debate."

That used to be a tool that favored Republicans who once held 33 seats in the officially non-partisan Unicameral. The party lost three seats in the November election, dropping to 30. The number of Democrats increased by two to 17, and the number of Independents increased from one to two (including Chambers).

Colleagues, lobbyists and observers admit that Chambers plays the rules book like a piano. But repeated attempts to lower the number of votes necessary for cloture have failed and the body still allows unlimited amendments and therefore allows individual lawmakers to wield a lot of influence. Erickson said it's up to lawmakers and the speaker to enforce the rules and limit filibusters. She admits that the traditional attitude in the one-house Legislature appears to favor maximizing free and open debate.

In Ernie's absence, the most recent filibuster was last year on an expanded gambling issue.

Interestingly, other lawmakers have used the filibuster to make a point. In the 80's, Omaha Senator Marge Higgins launched a pre-lunch filibuster on an idea that would help her cause of nursing homes and care for senior citizens. Many lawmakers left the floor and returned to their offices to catch up on work, but a few stayed around and yielded their time to their colleague so she could make her point. Things returned to normal after lunch.

Likewise, Sen. Lorraine Langford of Kearney launched a filibuster during the dinner hour toward the end of the session in an attempt to stop a funding bill that would provide for completion of the murals on the 18th floor of the Capitol. Most of her colleagues adjourned to the Senate Lounge to dine on lobbyist-provided dinner fare while Langford raged on about the Tri-Lateral Commission and her desire to remove the United Nations from United States soil. The bill ultimately advanced.

Senator Jennie Roback of Columbus staged a similar dinner-hour filibuster on a bill dealing with women's rights and read to her colleagues from a book while many of them also excused themselves for dinner or a card game in the second-floor offices of a then-popular longtime Omaha Senator, not Chambers.

treatment facility.

Residential treatment centers work for a lot of people, and this particular one has saved countless lives, but it wasn't a fit for me. I knew going into the situation that I would be as sick as I had ever been, but I thought that I would be in a medically-monitored situation where I could fight the battle of my life with a modicum of dignity.

I was wrong.

The detox center at the treatment facility was a ward. I was led back to a room with four beds lined up along one wall. The room was freezing (I suppose because everyone in detox has severe sweats), and it smelled like rotten eggs mixed with urine mixed with feces. I shared the room with three strangers — two meth addicts, and an alcoholic who was so addicted that she had walked away from the center the previous Saturday night, and when members of the staff picked her up at a downtown bar, she had a blood alcohol level of .40. Almost dead.

There was one bathroom for all of us.

By midnight the first night, my sickness was horrible. The stomach spasms were like labor pains. I was alternately so cold that I couldn't pile on enough blankets, and so hot that I felt like I was being microwaved. My body ached. My head pounded.

The mental aspect can only be described as torture. My mind raced. I couldn't control my thoughts, and felt like I was being held captive and couldn't get away. I knew I was going to have a heart attack behind that closed door, and no one would know it until the next morning.

The worst part, though, was the extreme anxiety. It ran through my body like the scene in Rambo III where the guard at the P.O.W. camp shocks Sylvester Stallone with zaps of electricity. But the current running through my body was constant. It felt like my fingertips would burst open, and lightning bolts would strike out. I visibly

And still, I had to walk down the hallway to the "nurse's" station, and ask for help. At various points throughout the night, that was impossible (note to all caregivers, when someone is going through detox, they are sicker than most of them have ever been, or will ever be again, unless stricken with a disease. They should be treated thusly). When I could walk down the hall, one of the nurses then took my blood pressure (standard procedure), and afterward, gave me a pill to help control my skyrocketing blood pressure. That was it. That was the only help that was offered.

On my own

After several trips down the hallway, I knew the place wasn't right for me. The next afternoon, my husband and daughter came to get me. The counselor at the center released me "against clinical advice," and told me that, if I tried to "get clean" on my own, I would fail. I told her that she didn't know me at all. It might take me 12 years to make a decision, but when I make up my mind about something, it's a done deal.

After a trip to a regional hospital because of dehydration, I came back to Falls City, visited a local doctor for help with the anxiety, then came home. I set my bottle of pills on the counter, and vowed not to take more than one a day for the first five days, and half of one a day for the following five days. Then, I was quitting entirely.

The battle that I fought for the next four weeks, however, was inhumane. The physical part was like influenza A and B at the same time. Dripping sweats followed by unbearable chills. Stomach cramps and diarrhea every day. Extreme vomiting. Pounding headaches right above the eyes. Stuffy, yet running nose. Aches and pains that were so deep I could feel them in my bones.

The mental torture was like a horror movie. At times, I had no idea what was real and what wasn't. I was alternately euphoric, and the next day, bottom-of-the-barrel depressed. Some days, I was so exhausted that I could barely get to the bathroom across the hall. On those days, I couldn't even comb my hair, let alone take a shower. Sometimes, the room where I stood or lay down either vibrated like rat-a-tat-tat — or breathed in and out. There were days when I couldn't walk straight, and ran into things. Other times, I couldn't focus enough to read or write. I couldn't come up with the right words to complete a legible sentence. Some days, I wrote rambling notes that were nothing short of crazy. I lost chunks of time > because of memory loss, and had entire conversations that I don't remember to this day.

'Anxiety nearly broke me'

But it was the anxiety that nearly broke me. For the first five days, my countdown to one pill a day was hour-by-hour, then minute-by-minute. When I got down to the last 15 minutes, I actually stood by the counter and watched the clock, shaking like I'd had 14 cups of coffee. I hated myself for what I had done to my body and my life, but I wasn't taking that pill for any reason, until it was time. I had made up my mind that I was doing this, and my will was the only thing of which I was certain.

During one time period the second week, I was awake and pacing for 33 hours, slept for six, then was awake again for 44. I was violently ill for 24 of those, and was certain that I wasn't going to live through it. My husband would have taken me to the emergency room, but I couldn't lift my head off of the pillow, and was too humiliated to call for an ambulance. I thought I was going to die, and at that point, prayed for it. Unable to even move my head, I called a doctor and got a prescription for anti-nausea medication. I knew if I didn't get better, I would need to be rehydrated in the ER. But I continued to gut it out.

After I decided I was done with hydrocodone for good (with six pills still left in the bottle), I gutted my way through feeding time. If left the pills on the counter, and vowed not to take a single one. I sometimes stared them down, just to prove that I was the stronger one. When I wasn't the stronger one, I got down on my knees.

Throughout the second month, the physical symptoms began to let up, and my mind started slowly circling the track, instead of racing around it. I was able to get out of the house a couple of times, and talked to a counselor who specialized in drug dependency and addiction. His knowledge and support helped me tremendously, but the anxiety continued to test me. It put up a fierce battle.

But I won.

Six months later

It has now been six months since I started this war, and even though symptoms can (and do) pop up periodically, and I can still become extremely agitated or even enraged for no apparent reason (and will for up to a year), I am proud to say that I have triumphed over the most difficult part. My friends and family say I am back to my old self. There's a light in my eyes again. Heck, my skin and hair even feel different.

I threw the hydrocodone away. There are no more opiates in my bottle, my house, or my life. I fight back pain with exercise, non-narcotic pain medication, and great professional massages. All three help, but I will probably battle chronic pain the rest of my life. I've just decided that I would rather fight the pain than fight for my life.

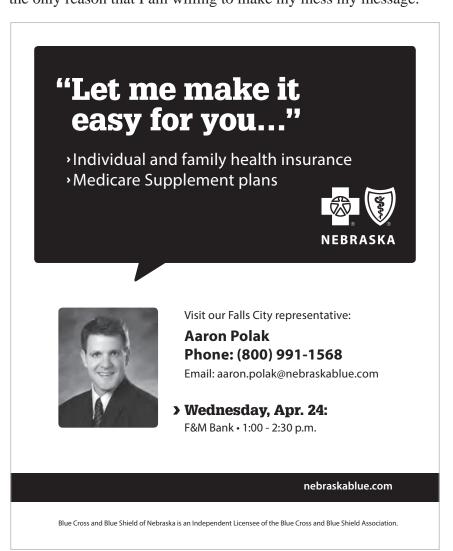

'I found me'

Now that I've fought this battle, though, I can do anything. This was the hardest thing I have ever done, but now, I can set anything on the counter and say, "No."

I lost two months of my life, but what I found was worth it. I found me.

My mess my message

If you (or a loved one) need to fight this battle, get help. Don't do it on your own because it is pure torture, but do it today. Those painkillers aren't just killing your pain. They are killing you. And that is the only reason that I am willing to make my mess my message.

Kansas man charged with two felonies

A Hiawatha, KS, man was charged with two counts of felony child abuse last week in Richardson County Court for his role in a March 15 traffic stop.

Court documents allege that a witness saw a man later identified as 27-year-old Jeffrey S. Landon, driving a dark colored Suburban erratically at a highrate of speed and that a child was seen hanging out the passenger side window with no child restraint device in use.

The witness, who later identified himself as Jason Edie, an off-duty Kansas State Patrolman and former Falls City resident, phoned the Falls City Police Department at approximately 4:45 p.m. and informed them he was following the vehicle and provided the dispatcher with the vehicle's location.

Officers with the FCPD made contact with the suspect, who at the time was being detained on the ground by Edie. Landon allegedly smelled of alcohol and was hostile to the officers, threatened them and used vulgar language.

Landon was released on a $4,500 bond after providing ten percent and is scheduled to appear again in Richardson County Court on May 1.

NEST college savings plans top $3 billion

The Nebraska Educational Savings Trust, Nebraska's state-sponsored 529 college savings program, topped $3 billion in assets as of March 31, 2013, the end of the first quarter, State Treasurer Don Stenberg announced today.

"This milestone is a remarkable accomplishment for Nebraska's college savings program and reflects account holders' confidence in our program, which is now 12 years old. This number assures us that families trust NEST and are demonstrating that trust by opening new college savings accounts and continuing to contribute to their existing accounts," Treasurer Stenberg said.

Stenberg said he anticipates NEST assets will grow even more with the passage of LB296, a measure introduced by Sen. Galen Hadley in the 2013 legislative session that would increase the amount that can be deducted from state income tax from $5,000 to $10,000 for a single person or a married couple filing jointly. The bill was made a priority bill by Sen. Lydia Brasch.

The Nebraska Educational Savings Trust offers four college savings plans: the NEST Direct College Savings Plan, the NEST Advisor College Savings Plan, the TD Ameritrade 529 College Savings Plan, and the State Farm College Savings Plan.

First National Bank of Omaha is the program manager, and investments are approved by the Nebraska Investment Council. Treasurer Stenberg is the NEST Trustee. State-sponsored 529 savings plans take their name from Section 529 of the U.S. Internal Revenue Code.

"We have one of the best college savings programs in the country right here in Nebraska," Stenberg said. "That's why more than 203,000 families nationwide including 55,000 Nebraska families—are saving for college with NEST plans. We are very proud of our NEST college savings plans and the value they provide for families looking for responsible and effective ways to save for college."

Two of Nebraska's college savings plans—the NEST Direct College Savings Plan and the NEST Advisor College Savings Plan received the highest rating possible from the nationally recognized savingforcollege.com, website, in 2012. The website's highest "5-cap" rating was given for both resident and non-resident accounts in the two NEST plans. Factors used to assign the ratings were performance, costs, features, and reliability.

Nebraska's two other 529 plans also received high ratings from savingforcollege.com

The TD Ameritrade College Savings Plan received 4.5 caps for resident accounts and four caps for non-resident accounts. The State Farm College Savings Plan received four caps for both resident and non-resident accounts. The icon used for the ratings is a graduation mortarboard, thus use of the term cap.

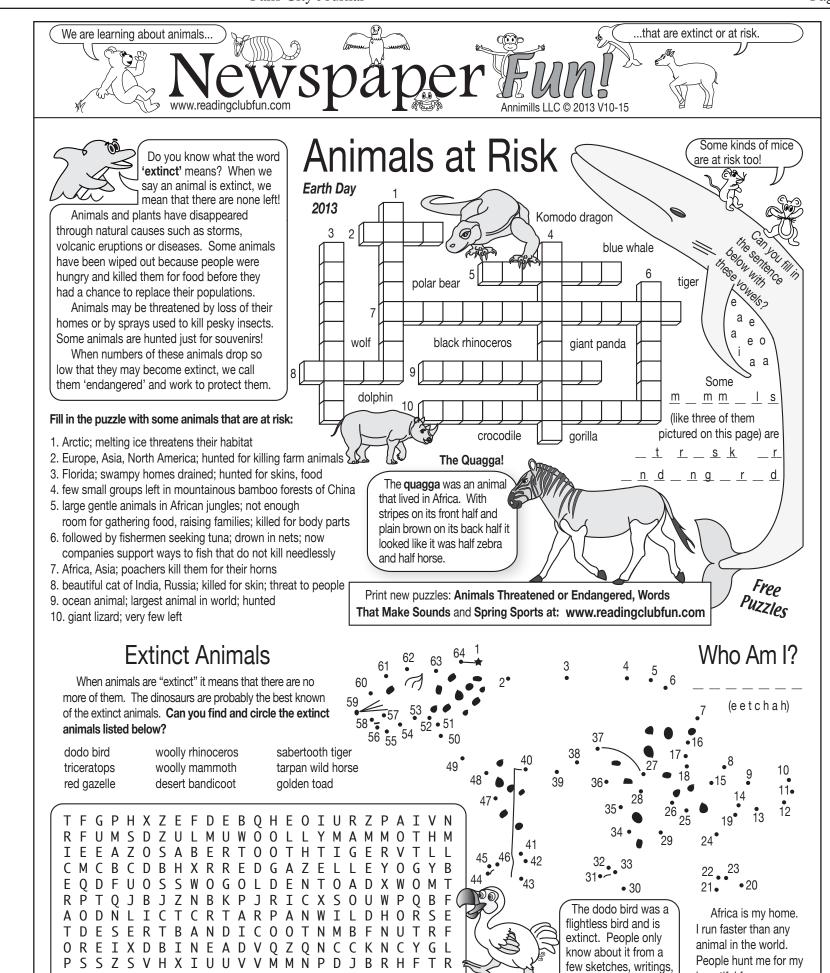

Also in 2011 the variety of options available through the Nebraska college savings program was recognized nationally by Kiplinger's Personal Finance magazine. The magazine named NEST the "Best College Savings Plan" for Fund Selection. It was the fourth time Kiplinger's had included Nebraska's 529 plans in its "Best College Savings Plan" listing in various categories.

The following are the latest statistics about NEST:

Total Assets— $3,050,122,995 Total Accounts—203,756 Average Account Size—$15,077 New Accounts so far in 2013—5,772 New Accounts in 2012—22,380 Average Age of Beneficiary—12 Average Age of Account Owner—53 Families can learn more

In 1935, an estimated 1.5 million people rode freight trains as hoboes across the country. A hobo is a man who travels to find work. After the Civil War many soldiers had no home to return to so they wandered through the countryside in search of work, often as migrant farmhands. Because they often carried their own tools, including hoes, they were given the name "hoe boys," which was later shortened to

"hobo."

Shamalas at Good News

Tim and Karla Shamala and children, who formerly served as the pastoral family at Good News Assembly of God Church and founders of the South India Outreach, Mysore, Kamataka, South India, will hold a service at 6:30 p.m. Sunday, April 21, at the church, located at 6th and Reavis in Falls City.

They will share the passion and vision God has placed on their hearts for the people of South India. Tim was born and raised in India. At the age of 18, he decided to move to America to study and become a CPA. But he was led to Trinity Bible College in North Dakota and was called into full-time ministry. It was at Trinity that he met his wife, Karla. They were married in 1997 and served in pastoral ministry for nine years — four years spent here in Falls City at Good News Assembly of God Church.

After a visit to Tim's family in June of 2004, both Tim and Karla felt an urgent call to India. Within 10 months, they resigned the pastoral position at Good News, sold their home and moved across the world with their four small children. The years since then have brought many physical illnesses and opposition and spiritual battles. "But we know that you will rejoice with them as they share with everyone the awesome things God has done," a Good News spokesperson said.

All are welcome to join the Good News congregation on Sunday evening, April 21, to welcome the Shamalas back for a visit and hear the Good News that they are giving and receiving from South India. Refreshments will be served following the service in the Fellowship Hall.

Timeliness may not be this column's strongest suit, but with the NCAA men's national championship game being played last Monday, the possibility of putting this together for last week's Journal seemed a tall task.

The topic is one that has been discussed a great deal by many talking heads nationally. The only subject that received more discussion in this office has been the prospect of this really being the Royals' year.

Now that I've dragged you into the third paragraph, I'll cut to the chase. The topic that's had my knickers in a twist for the last few years is the abhorrent game that is men's college basketball.

That might ruffle some feathers, but you are kidding yourself if you think what has been happening between the lines in men's college basketball is what Dr. Naismith would have envisioned for his game more than 120 years ago.

Sure, that was an absolute dandy between Louisville and Michigan, but I'm speaking of the overall product, night in and night

Physical play and referees allowance of said play has tainted the sport. The once fast-paced, wide-open game has come to a screeching halt. Ken Pomeroy, who runs KenPom.com, has data that showed this season's average tempo of 66 possessions per game was the slowest in the last 10 seasons. In 1990 Loyola Marymount, coached by the legendary Paul Westhead, averaged 122.4 points per game and averaged 103.6 possessions per game.

RJ Bell, a Vegas insider and a frequent guest on Scott Van Pelt and Ryen Russillo's ESPN radio show and someone I follow on Twitter, tweeted the following last Monday afternoon, "This NCAA tournament was the lowest scoring tournament since the 3-pointer was added in 1987."

If you watched any amount of men's college basketball this year or any in the last three or four seasons, this shouldn't shock you. In a weird way, I almost felt vindicated reading it. It was almost an, "I knew it!" moment.

Guys wear padding under their jerseys and shorts, on their shins, calves and elbows. For me, the first example of this came when I saw the replay of Kentucky's Nerlens Noel's ACL injury. Go back and look at it. Noel had enough padding from his knee down to double as a goalie for a hockey team.

The following is a transcript from Louisville head coach Rick Pitino's press conference the Sunday before the national championship game. Pitino addressed the question from a reporter who said this past basketball season was viewed as being "ugly."

Pitino provided some great insight in his answer and I felt the whole excerpt was worth reading:

Q. This has been viewed as kind of an ugly college basketball season. You're close to winning it all this year. Do you agree, disagree? PITINO: Ugly in what way?

Q. Not a lot of scoring, a lot of physical play, difficult to watch at times. I don't even know if you agree.

PITINO: I do agree. I think Jay Bilas has done a tirade on the way college is being played. I started thinking about it because I was on a committee many years ago with a bunch of coaches, Pat Riley, Larry Brown, general managers, about 18 of us in the room. David Stern called the meeting to change professional basketball. I think at the time there were only one or two teams breaking 100. Pro basketball was ugly, just like you're saying

We talked about the zone. We talked about eight seconds in the backcourt. Then we left the meeting and everybody wanted to do something about it.

Go back a little bit, for all the New York guys. My team with the Knicks averaged 116.8 points in the game and we were third in the league in scoring. The NBA came full cycle, couldn't break 100.

What was happening is, all the things we tried to come up with weren't the answer. I went to see Earl Clark play against Miami. Earl was playing LeBron. Earl just basically took his hand and just rested it on him and they went, foul. What happened in the NBA now is they stopped all the arm bars, all the standing up of screens, all the coming across and chopping the guy. They stopped all that. Now there's freedom of movement in the NBA and you see great offense. When you coach in the Big East, you should wear bodyguard. Peyton (Siva) wears bodyguard, shoulder pads, because you can't cut, can't move. The referees are caught in a quandary. They're saying, "We're going to ruin the game, we're on TV." Jay is 100% right, if we want to get back, take a page out of the NBA, have freedom of movement. I always liked to watch the old films of Clyde Frazier and, you don't see defense touch anybody at all. Everybody cuts and passes, freedom of movement. That's what we got to get back to. The only way to do it is the first 10 games of the season, the games have to be ugly and the players will adjust, then you will see great offense again. Like the NBA now, you see all those great scoring teams. Now they have a great product, and we need to go the route of the NBA.

That's a long answer, but I think that's the truth.

Pitino's description about freedom of movement is what really stood out to me and it seems like a fairly easy fix. The changes could be phased in over the course of a couple seasons and players would adjust quickly. In 3-5 years, the game's pace would return to its old form and scores in the 40's and 50's would no longer be nightly occurrences, but embarrassing reminders of the past.

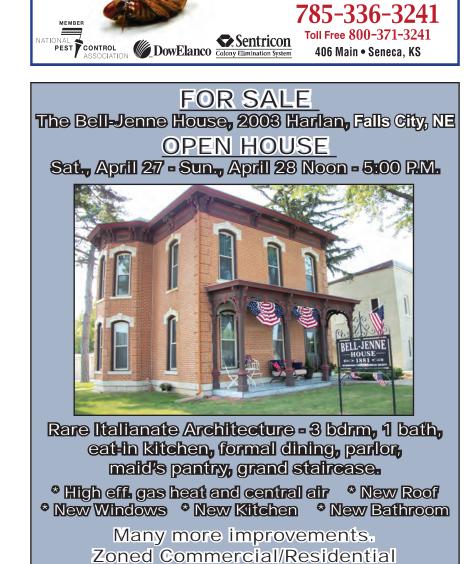

The NCAA has to address this problem and implement changes to curb this recent trend in college basketball. Will they? Who knows? Ratings for the tournament were up 11 percent from last year and were the highest since the 1994 tournament. The NCAA might look at those numbers and decide the problem does not exist.

That would be the most flagrant of fouls.

Eight tax-time errors to avoid

If you make a mistake on your tax return, it usually takes the IRS longer to process it. The IRS may have to contact you about that mistake before your return is processed. This will delay the receipt of your tax refund.

The IRS reminds filers that e-filing their tax return greatly lowers the chance of errors. In fact, taxpayers are about twenty times more likely to make a mistake on their return if they file a paper return instead of e-filing their return.

Here are eight common errors to avoid:

Wrong or missing Social Security numbers. Be sure you enter SSNs for yourself and others on your tax return exactly as they are on the Social Security cards.

Names wrong or misspelled. Be sure you enter names of all individuals on your tax return exactly as they are on their Social Security cards.

Filing status errors. Choose the right filing status. There are five filing statuses: Single, Married Filing Jointly, Married Filing Separately, Head of Household and Qualifying Widow(er) With Dependent Child. See Publication 501, Exemptions, Standard Deduction and Filing Information, to help you choose the right one. E-filing your tax return will also help you choose the right filing

Math mistakes. If you file a paper tax return, double check the math. If you e-file, the software does the math for you. For example, if your Social Security benefits are taxable, check to ensure you figured the taxable portion correctly.

Errors in figuring credits, deductions. Take your time and read the instructions in your tax booklet carefully. Many filers make mistakes figuring their Earned Income Tax Credit, Child and Dependent Care Credit and the standard deduction. For example, if you are age 65 or older or blind check to make sure you claim the correct, larger standard deduction amount.

Wrong bank account numbers. Direct deposit is the fast, easy and safe way to receive your tax refund. Make sure you enter your bank routing and account numbers correctly.

Forms not signed, dated. An unsigned tax return is like an unsigned check – it's invalid. Remember both spouses must sign a joint return.

Electronic signature errors. If you e-file your tax return, you will sign the return electronically using a Personal Identification Number. For security purposes, the software will ask you to enter the Adjusted Gross Income from your originally-filed 2011 federal tax return. Do not use the AGI amount from an amended 2011 return or an AGI provided to you if the IRS corrected your return. You may also use last year's PIN if you e-filed last year and remember your

Tiger golfers win HTRS Invite

Three Falls City High golfers finished in the top five and four medaled in the Tigers first place finish at Humboldt-TR-S Invitational played in chilly, damp conditions at Kirkman's Lakeview Golf Course on Thursday, Apr. 9th.

National Award to ESU 4's Stokebrand

Ellen Stokebrand, Director of Special Education at Educational Service Unit 4 in Auburn, was presented the "Outstanding Administrator of Special Education Award" by the Council of Administrators of Special Education at the annual Council for Exceptional Children Conference, held in San Antonio, TX, earlier in April. This national award, presented annually by CASE, recognizes individuals for making significant professional contributions to leadership in the administration of programs for students with disabili-

In presenting the award,

Laurie VanderPloeg, CASE President, noted that Stokebrand has provided an unwavering style of dedicated professionalism and service to the field of special education, first as a teacher and now as an administrator.

Jack Moles, superintendent of Johnson County Central, wrote "Ellen has been instrumental in my principals and I becoming better versed in how to provide for our students and in helping our staff members. She has been easy to work with, but also very firm in her suggestions to us. I believe I am much more informed in dealing with parents because of her input." Jon Fisher, the administrator of ESU 4, added "Ellen understands special education law and how it impacts students and districts. She works very hard with the Nebraska Department of Education and Nebraska Council of School Administrators regarding Special Education. She is an asset, not only to ESU 4 and our districts, but to the state of Nebraska."

Stokebrand has been the Director of Special Education at ESU 4 since July of 1998. During that time, she has supported the districts of southeast Nebraska in providing technical assistance, staff development, and the support of programming for infants, toddlers and school-age students with disabilities. As part of her responsibilities, Ellen provides districts with the most up-to-date information in the field of special education, including legislation and its impact on districts, students and their families. Stokebrand is active in the advancement and promotion of special education beyond the boundaries of ESU 4. She has served on various statewide committees, including as president of the Nebraska Association of Special Education Supervisors (NASES) and a member of the Nebraska Council of School Administrators (NCSA) Executive Board. She has served as chair of the ESU Special Populations Directors (ESPD) and as co-chair of the ESU Professional Development Organization (ESUPDO.) Stokebrand is currently Legislative representative for NASES and NCSA and has participated in the national CASE Legislative Leadership Seminar for the past 5 years. Stokebrand is also a member of Peru State College's adjunct faculty teaching in the area of special education. Stokebrand was named the NASES Distinguished Special Education Director last Au-

New fire truck for Humboldt Rural Fire

Rock Herr and John Cander, representing the Humboldt Rural Fire District, and Mark Joy of the State Bank of Table Rock met Tuesday, April 9, with the Richardson County Commissioners to discuss plans to purchase a fire truck.

The proposal is for the purchase of a 2013 Ford F550 fire truck at a cost of $88,000 to be financed for five years at 2.5% interest.

Board members Dave Sickel, Jim Davidson and Jim Standerford moved to approve the purchase of the truck — a purchase that requires bonded indebtedness of the district. Cander, president of the district, and Herr, secretary/treasurer were authorized to sign the governmental loan certificate with the State Bank of Table Rock, Humboldt Branch.

Highway Supt. Scott Huppert reported that the demonstration of a product to control dust had been scheduled and that employees will be attending a bridge inspection training. He said the recently held county surplus auction resulted in total sales of $31,080. Additional brush notices were also presented to the board. The commissioners received a request from the Village of Stella for the use of county road right-of-way to install a water line under a road on 717 Trail, west of 643 Avenue. The line will provide water access to the cemetery. The board will draft an agreement to approve this request.

Brian Dixon, Omaha, met with the board to interview for the position of director/administrative assistant for the Richardson County Emergency Management Agency.

Sheriff Randy Houser requested to meet with the board at the Armory to examine the county equipment that is stored there, in particular the EMA Emergency Operations Center trailer. Sheriff Houser requested that EMA Director Jim Gerweck accompany the board for the inspection. The sheriff requested that the board grant approval for the use of the EOC trailer when his department is working an accident or crime scenes that might involve long hours of investigation, clean-up, questioning witnesses, etc. The board informed the sheriff that in times of need Gerweck or another representative of EOC should be contacted to request use of the equipment. The board also requested that Gerweck respond to the requests of the sheriff when made in a timely manner.

In other developments, the board:

—Opened sealed bids for the purchase of a road department truck. Eight bids were received and accepted for further review by the board and road department.

-Met with Assessor Pam Vice, who presented information regarding correspondence that her office received from the Nebraska Real Property Appraiser Board regarding the county's contract for appraisal services. She will be reviewing this matter with other county assessors in southeast Nebraska, but has requested that the board consider this position become a salaried county position beginning July 1, 2013.

SENCA youth event Thursday in Auburn

On Thursday, April 18, 275 area pre-school students and their families will join their teachers and school staff, Auburn and Falls City youth mentors, and SENCA employees for the 5th Annual SENCA Head Start Pre-School Track and Field Day event held at Auburn High School.

The event will take place from 9:30 a.m. until noon. The students will participate in 14 different track and field events, including: Tunnel crawl, over/ under hurdles, sack races, football throw, etc. Each activity is designed to enhance various motor skills. Among the many benefits are physical fitness, confidence and stronger self-esteem, more energy, better memory and simply a good feeling about themselves.

Children and their families learn the importance of healthy eating during the event. By choosing nutritious and tasty foods necessary for proper growth and development, kids maintain a healthy weight more so than kids who consume a diet full of empty calories found in foods that contain high amounts of sugar and fat. The benefits of healthy eating for children last a lifetime, because the effects on childhood health often translate to how healthy the person will be later in life.

Kimpston, SENCA Anita Health and Mental Health Coordinator, is the event planner and mentioned that this year a surprise "special guest" or two may be appearing at the event, weather permitting. In case of rain, the event will be held Thursday, April 25.

Plenty of food, too much politics

The 2001 World Food Prize Laureate said the world can produce enough food to feed its growing population, but global food policies and politics are major impediments.

Per Pinstrup-Andersen of Cornell University made his comments Tuesday during his Heuermann Lecture at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. As have most other speakers in the series, Pinstrup-Andersen focused on the world's capacity to feed a population expected to grow from 7 billion to 9 billion by 2050.

"We've got lots of food in the world," Pinstrup-Andersen said. "The problem is inappropriate policies, not food supply.'

Since 2007, he noted, food prices have fluctuated dramatically. At one point, many experts predicted, incorrectly, the end of inexpensive food. India ended up with 80 million tons of grain in storage last year, half of it outside, rotting on the ground. Zambian farmers doubled their corn production from about 2005 to 2011.

Pinstrup-Andersen estimated that about 2.9 quadrillion (that's 12 zeros) pounds of food are lost every year throughout the distribution system. That amount would feed the 2 billion people expected to be added to the population. Although it's unrealistic to expect to capture that entire loss, some of it could be saved through better policies and management.

Pinstrup-Andersen said he expects large fluctuations in food prices to continue and perhaps get worse. Climate change is one reason. Others include governmental policy, speculation, reduced grain stocks and use of grain in biofuels.

Asia and sub-Saharan Africa are of particular concern. By 2030, estimates are that two-thirds of the world's middle class will live in Asia, compared to just 28 percent in 2009. As their wealth grows, their diets will change - fewer grains, fruits and vegetables; more vegetable oil, meat, eggs and fish. "We need to pay a lot of attention to the new middle class in Asia," said Pinstrup-Andersen, the H.E. Babcock Professor of Food, Nutrition and Public Policy, the J. Thomas Clark Professor of Entrepreneurship and a professor of applied economics at Cornell University, and an adjunct professor of food economics at the University of Copenhagen. Pinstrup-Andersen said more money must be invested in research and technology, including genetic modification. He also called for more investment in rural infrastructures in developing countries; orderly trade policies; rules governing land acquisition; and antitrust legislation. Pinstrup-Andersen served 10 years as the International Food Policy Research Institute's director general in Washington, D.C., and seven years as a department head. He also served seven years as an economist at the International Center for Tropical Agriculture in Colombia, and six years as a professor at Wageningen University. Heuermann Lectures focus on providing and sustaining enough food, natural resources and renewable energy for the world's people, and on securing the sustainability of rural communities where the vital work of producing food and renewable energy occurs. They're made possible by a gift from B. Keith and Norma Heuermann of Phillips, long-time university supporters with a strong commitment to Nebraska's production agriculture, natural resources, rural areas and people.

Lectures are archived at http://heuermannlectures.unl.edu and broadcast on NET2 World at a date following the lecture.

SBA approved $61.2 million in loans over last six months across Nebraska

The number of small business loans financed through the SBA proved crucial to start-up and existing small business owners across Nebraska by providing needed access to capital in the first half of Fiscal 2013, ending March 31.

Over the past six months, the SBA, working with our commercial lender partners, approved 186 loans for $61.2 million in volume for small businesses across the state, a rate which closely matches the previous pre-recessionary participation rate.

In a continuing sign of confidence in Nebraska's entrepreneurial economy, 45 percent of SBA loan approvals in the first half of the fiscal year went to fund new businesses; nationwide, that figure normally is between 33 and 40 percent.

More loan dollars in the past six months went to accommodation and food service businesses ($12.8 million) than to any other field, followed by retail trade ($10 million), health care and social assistance ($6.6 million) and manufacturing ($6.3 million).

As a direct result of SBA-guaranteed small business financing throughout the state over the past six months, more than 800 new jobs are being created in Nebraska, and more than 1,400 jobs are being kept on payrolls. This economic activity as a result of small business growth is a crucial sign, considering that according to the SBA's Office of Advocacy, half of all jobs in Nebraska are from companies with fewer than 100 employees.

"The pace of SBA loan-making and evidence of access to capital improving for small business owners is a healthy sign for Nebraska's economy," said Leon Milobar, District Director of SBA's Nebraska District Office. "It's encouraging to see they are taking advantage of our loan programs in steady numbers. We're proud of our role expanding credit to our entrepreneurs as they establish themselves in the marketplace, grow, and create new jobs across the state. We're finding even with the continuing challenges throughout the economy, small businesses here in Nebraska continue to find opportunities to expand their operations."

SBA-backed loans represent a fraction of small business lending nationwide. However, these loans are closely monitored as an indicator of a willingness to lend to start-up and existing small busi-

City of Falls City Annual Water Quality Report For the period of Jan. 1 to Dec.31, 2011

The City of Falls City Utility Department served 2189 customers with approximately 237,000,000 gallons of water in 2012 alone. Customers are provided high quality safe drinking water that surpasses all federal and state standards.

In 1996, the U.S. Congress revised the Safe Drinking Water Act, requiring public water supply systems to send annual water quality reports to all of their customers, beginning with the year 1998.

This report is intended to provide you with important information about your drinking water and the efforts made to provide safe drinking water.

For more information regarding this report, or public participation opportunities contact: Alan Romine at Falls City Utility Department. (402) 245-2724) If you would like to observe the decision-making processes that affect drinking water quality, please attend the Utility Board regularly scheduled meetings on the first Thursday of every month at 5:30 P.M., City Hall, 1820 Towle St., Falls City. If you would like to participate in the process, please contact the City Clerk to arrange to be placed on the

Source of Your Drinking Water

Regulated

The sources of drinking water (both tap and bottled water) include rivers, lakes, streams, ponds, reservoirs, springs, and groundwater wells. As water travels over the surface of the land or through the ground, it dissolves naturally-occurring minerals and, in some cases, radioactive material, and can pick up substances resulting from the presence of animals or from human activity.

The source of drinking water used by the City of Falls City water system is Groundwater provided by eleven wells located south of Rulo, NE.

The water is lime-softened to remove iron and manganese hardness. It then flows through filters to remove fine particles which may be present in the water. Before entering the distribution system, the water is disinfected with chlorine and the naturally occurring level of fluoride is raised to aid in the prevention of tooth decay.

Source Water Assessment Availability

The Nebraska Department of Environmental Quality (NDEQ) has completed the Source Water Assessment. Included in the assessment is a Wellhead Protection Area Map, potential contaminant source inventory, vulnerability rating, and source water protection information. The City, with assistance from the Nemaha Natural Resource District is further investigating potential contaminant sources and the possible avenues of mitigation. To view the Source Water Assessment or for more information please contact the Falls City Utility Offices or NDEQ at (402) 471-6988.

Contaminants in Drinking Water

Drinking water, including bottled water, may reasonably be expected to contain at least small amounts of some contaminants. The presence of contaminants does not necessarily indicate that water poses a health risk. More information about contaminants and potential health effects can be obtained by calling the EPA's Safe Drinking Water Hotline at (800) 471-6998.

Contaminants that may be present in source water include:

Microbial contaminants, such as viruses and bacteria, which may come from sewage treatment plants, septic systems, agricultural livestock operations, and wildlife.

Inorganic contaminants, such as salts and metals, which can be naturally occurring or result from urban storm water runoff, industrial, or domestic wastewater discharges, oil and gas production, mining, or farming.

Pesticides and herbicides, which may come from a variety of sources such as agriculture, urban storm water runoff, and residential uses.

Organic chemical contaminants, including synthetic and volatile organic chemicals which are by-products of industrial processes and petroleum production, and can also come from gas stations, urban storm water runoff, and septic systems.

Radioactive contaminants, which can be naturallyoccurring or be the result of oil and gas production and mining activities.

In order to ensure that tap water is safe to drink, EPA prescribes regulations which limit the amount of certain contaminants in water provided by public water systems. FDA regulations establish limits for contaminants in bottled water which must provide the same protection of public health.

Some people may be more vulnerable to contaminants in drinking water than the general population. Immuno-compromised persons such as persons with cancer undergoing chemotherapy, persons who have undergone organ transplants, people with HIV/AIDS or other immune system disorders, some elderly and infants can be particularly at risk from infections. These people should seek advice about drinking water from their health care providers. EPA/CDC guidelines on appropriate means to lessen the risk of infection by Cryptosporidium and other microbial contaminants are available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4791).

The City of Falls City is required to test for the following contaminants: Coliform Bacteria, Antimony, Arsenic, Asbestos, Barium, Beryllium, Cadmium, Chromium, Copper, Cyanide, Fluoride, Lead, Mercury, Nickel, Nitrate, Nitrite, Selenium, Sodium, Thallium, Alachlor, Atrazine, Benzo(a)pyrene, Carbofuran, Chlordane, Dalapon, Di(2-ethylhexyl)phthalate, Dibromochloropropane, Dinoseb, Di(2-ethylhexyl)phthalate, Dipromochloropropane, Dinoseb, Di(2-ethylhexyl)phthalate, Clyphosate, Heptachlor, Heptachlor epoxide, Hexachlorobenzene, Hexachlorocyclopentadiene, Lindane, Methoxychlor, Oxamyl (Vydate), Pentachlorophenol, Picloram, Polychlorinated biphenyls, Simazine, Toxaphene, Dioxin, Silvex, Benzene, Carbon Tetrachloride, o-Dichlorobenzene, Para-Dichlorobenzene, 1,2-Dichlorethane, 1,1-Dichloroethylene, Cis-1,2-Dichloroethylene, Trans-1,2-Dichloroethylene, Dichlorobenzene, 1,2-Dichloropropane, Ethylbenzene, Monochlorobenzene, 1,2-4-Trichloroethane, 1,1,1-Trichloroethane, 1,1,2-Trichloroethane, Trichloroethylene, Vinyl Chloride, Styrene, Tetrachloroethylene, Toluene, Xylenes(total), Gross Alpha (minus Uranium & Radium 226), Radium 226, Paradium 228, Sulfate, Chloroform, Bromodichloromethane, Chloroethzene, 1,1-Dichloropropane, 1,1-Dichloroethane, 1,2-Tetrachloroethane, 1,2-Dichloropropane, Chlorobenzene, 1,1-Dichloropropane, Chlorobenzene, 1,1-Dichloropropane, 1,1-Dichloroethane, 2,2-Dichloropropane, 1,1,1,2-Tetrachlorethane, Chloroethane, 2,2-Dichloropropane, 1,1,1,2-Tetrachlorethane, Chloroethane, 2,2-Dichloropropane, 1,3-Dichloropropane, 1,1-Dichloropropane, 1,1-Dich

Cross-Connection Question And Answer 1: What is potentially dangerous about an unprotected sill cock?

A: The purpose of a sill cock is to permit easy attachment of a hose for outside watering purposes. However, a garden hose can be extremely hazardous because they are left submerged in swimming pools, lay in elevated locations (above the sill cock) watering shrubs, chemical sprayers are attached to hoses for weed-killing etc:

Coliforms are bacteria that are naturally present in the environment and are used as an indicator that other potentially harmful bacteria may be present. Coliforms were found in more samples than allowed and this was a warning of potential problems. Some people who drink water containing arsenic in excess of the MCL over many years could experience skin damage or problems with their circulatory system,, and may have an increased risk of getting cancer. Infants and children are typically more vulnerable to lead in drinking water than the general population. It is possible that lead levels at your home may be higher than at other home's in the community as a result of materials used in your home's plumbing. If you are concerned about elevated lead levels in your home's water, you may wish to have your water tested and flush you tap for 30 seconds to 2 minutes before using tap water. Additional information is available from the Safe Drinking Water Hotline (800-426-4761).

Note: The State requires monitoring of certain contaminants less than once per year because the concentrations of these contaminants do not change frequently. Therefore, some of this data may be more than one year old. MCL (Maximum Contaminant Level): The highest level of a contaminant that is allowed in drinking water. MCLs are set as close to the MCLGs as feasible using the best available treatment technology. MCLG (Maximum contaminant Level Goal): The level of a contaminant in drinking water below which there is known or expected risk to health. Celebrate Nat'l Library Week

This week, join libraries in schools, campuses and communities nationwide in celebrating National Library Week, a time to highlight the value of libraries, librarians and library volun-

Libraries provide services to the community. Libraries have changed, grown and evolved in how they provide for the needs of every member of their community.

The Falls City Library and Arts Center is celebrating National Library Week on Thursday, April 18, with three programs.

University of Nebraska Entomologist Alexandria Harris will host a program for students and their families from 3:30 to 5:30 p.m. A huge number of products produced by insects will be shown and those attending will create their very own insect. Insect cakes will be served. Ms. Harris is hosted by a Cargill Corporation grant written by Library Board member Kim Oliver. The program had been scheduled earlier, but was postponed because of snow.

Children's Librarian Dianne Hinz invites all preschool children age 3 and over to join her in celebrating libraries and books from 5:30-6:30 p.m.

And, the film series will continue with "People Will Talk," featuring Cary Grant and Jeanne Crain. This 1951 comedy will be shown at 6 p.m. in the Stalder Gallery. It is the third film in a series in which participants will help select future films.

Library programs are free and open to the public.

Library events are announced in the Falls City Journal, on KTNC Radio 1230 AM and Sunny 101.3 FM, Time Warner Cable, at www.fallscitylibrary. org, in handouts available at the library and in the Chamber of Commerce weekly email.

Library hours: Monday-Thursday, 10 a.m.-8 p.m.; Saturday, 9 a.m.-noon.
